The most generally useful medicine is Ayer's Pills. As a remedy for the various diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, these Pills have no equal. Their sugar-coating causes them not only to be easy and pleasant to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity in all climates and for any reasonable length of time. The best family medicine, Ayer's Pills are, also, unsurpassed for the use of travelers, soldiers, sailors, campers, and pioneers. In some of the most critical cases, when all other remedies have failed, rove effective.

"In the summer of 1864 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. C. Luce, Late Lieut. 56th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry.

DIRT BREEDS VERMIN

Of a good house-wife, who uses SAPOLIO, it is well said: "The mouse is muzzled in her house." Try it and keep your house clean. All grocers keep it.

Cleanliness and neatness about a house are necessary to insure comfort. Man likes comfort, and if he can't find it at home, he will seek elsewhere for it. Good housewives know that SAPOLIO makes a house clean and keeps it bright. Happiness always dwells in a comfortable home. Do you want cleanliness, comfort and happiness? Try SAPOLIO and you will be surprised at your success.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

WHY ARE SOME PEOPLE ALWAYS LATE?

They never look ahead nor think. People have been known to wait till planting season, run to the grocery for their seeds, and then repent over it for 12 months, rather than stop and think what they will want for the garden. VICK'S SEEDS never disappoint, is the verdict from the millions who have planted them. If it is Flower or Vegetable Seeds, Plants, Bulbs, or anything in this line, MAKE NO MISTAKE this year, but send 10 cents for Vick's Floral Guide, deduct the 10 cents from first order, it costs nothing. This pioneer catalogue contains three colored plates, Grandest Novelties ever offered, $200 in cash premiums to those sending club orders $1000 cash prizes at one of the State Fairs. Grand offer, chance for all. Made in different shape from ever before; 100 pages 8 1/4 x 10 1/2 inches.

THE CRUSADER.

BY ISABEL G. EATON.

In days of old the brave crusader fought
To win from pagan hands the Saviour's tomb;
From year to year each pilgrim warrior sought
And found his gory doom.

But still the cross of red the crescent dared,
Still knight and templar with undaunted crest
Pressed ever on where death and glory shared
Each warrior's noble quest.

Many a valorous deed of golden fame
Is traced in fadeless tints on history's page;
Godfrey de Bouillon, first of every name,
And first in knightly age.

From Charlemagne the Great, a soldier born,
Whose mighty strength against the Arab hurled,
Combats the Moslem in his pride and scorn,
The conqueror of the world.

And joyfully the Holy City rears
The Christian symbol once again on high,
And Godfrey's arm the victor's falchion wears,
The cross of chivalry!

Simon de Montfort, Louis, Saint of France,
Bold Richard Coeur de Lion, sought to win
The holy places from the Moslem's lance,
And sway of Saladin.

With eyes upraised on pointed spear of steel
Which once had pierced the Saviour's wounded side,
With purest faith they saw the blest Sangreal
In vision glorified.

Whence cometh forth so great a zeal to-day,
Which stirred the soul of templar and of king?
What faith bids man such loyal love display,
Such fervent following?

The Christian knight still finds his foe to slay,
The pilgrim's chant ascends, the war cry rings;
The crescent bow of evil flaunts its ray;
The siren pleasure sings.

Well armed is he who bears the shield divine,
And wages battle with the powers of sin,
Stronger than coat of mail, or Red Cross sign,
And sword of paladin.

Mightier than victor in the old crusade
Who conquers self with prayer and scourging rod;
A fairer prize than knightly accolade,
The praise and love of God!

We publish this week, in our extra issue, a very able paper on "The Eucharistic Sacrifice," by the Rev. F. E. Brightman, of the Pusey House, Oxford. The treatment of this profound subject strikes us as remarkable. It is clear and concise, and at the same time learned, especially in its illustrations from liturgies and ecclesiastical appointments. We are confident that this paper will interest our thoughtful readers, whatever may be their "school of Churchmanship." The letter of the secretary of the Chinese Church League will, it is hoped, arouse the attention of Churchmen to the pressing need of funds. We comment upon it in our editorial columns. The honorable part which Churchmen took in the Revolutionary War forms the subject of an article contributed by a valued correspondent; it is a topic upon which a book might be written. The Clergy Pension Fund should be kept before the Church until justice is done to her venerable servants. The department of Church work is, as usual, full and interesting.

A RUMOR, which we hope will be verified, has it that the bishopric of Peterborough has been offered to the Rev. Dr. Talbot, vicar of Leeds, formerly warden of Keble College.

THE dean and chapter of Durham have resolved to light their magnificent cathedral by electricity, and the motive power will be obtained from the River Wear.

No appearance has been entered by the Bishop of Lincoln or his proctors to the citation to appear before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. On petition to the Privy Council, permission to appear at any stage can be granted.

IN consequence of the attitude of the Council of the Protestant Churchmen's Alliance with regard to the Lincoln judgment, the Dean of Canterbury, the Rev. J. Robertson, of Kilburn, and the Rev. C. V. Childe, have resigned their seats on the Council.

THE Rev. B. Kephart, a missionary on the west coast of Africa, who recently voyaged from this country to Liberia, gives the following as the cargo of the steamer which carried him: 10,000 casks of rum, 11 cases of gin, 450 tons of gunpowder, and 14 missionaries. This is what might well be called a "mixed" cargo.

WHEN the mail left New Zealand, Bishop Suter, the venerable Bishop of Nelson, was lying dangerously ill. Whilst reading prayers in Bishopdale chapel, Nelson, he suddenly faltered and stopped. A medical examination showed that he was suffering from congestion of the brain, and that he had lost his eyesight.

THE first imperial diet of Japan has elected a Christian as its first president, Mr. Nakashima. That thirteen men who have professed the faith of the Crucified should be elected members of the diet, is more than the missionaries of the native Christians expected, and much less did they anticipate that a Christian would be chosen as the presiding officer. It is indeed a very gratifying fact, and a very auspicious sign.

The Church Eclectic says: "We hear that Bishop Potter has officially allowed 'Reservation for the Sick' at Holy Cross, as has been done occasionally by English bishops in congested districts. It is a mark of episcopal administration entirely oblivious of party considerations, and intent only upon the spiritual growth and edification of the Church, and the furtherance of the Gospel in all ways."

DR. THOMAS J. WALKER, of Peterborough, writes to The Times: "I observe that in a leading article in your issue of this morning (Jan. 12) you speak of the Bishop of Peterborough as 'a man whose health has not been altogether satisfactory for some time past.' That is written under a misapprehension. In the year 1883, his Lordship was prostrated by a severe illness, which held his life in jeopardy for several weeks. Happily, this illness ended in complete recovery, and I know no man of sixty-nine with greater mental and physical vigor than the Bishop of Peterborough."

THE oldest prelate of the Church of England is the Rt. Rev. Richard Durnford, D. D., Lord Bishop of Winchester, aged 88; the youngest, the Rt. Rev. Alfred George Edwards, D. D., Lord Bishop of St. Asaph, aged 41. The oldest prelate of the Church of Ireland is the Most Rev. Robert Bent Knox, D. D., Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of all Ireland, aged 83; the youngest, the Rt. Rev. Robert Samuel Gregg, D. D., Bishop of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, aged 56. The oldest Prelate of the Scotch Episcopal Church is the Rt. Rev. Charles Wordsworth, D. D., Bishop of St. Andrew's, aged 84; the youngest, the Rt. Rev. James Robert A. Chinnery Haldane, Bishop of Argyll and the Isles, aged 49.

"CANONICUS," writing to The Spectator, tells the following amazing story: "A short time since a letter reached the Lincoln post office, addressed as follows: 'A sa Grandeur Monseigneur l'Eveque de Lincoln.' The whole of the staff being apparently destitute of an elementary knowledge of the French language, the letter was returned to the post office in London with this endorsement: 'Cannot be found in Lincoln.' The education at St. Martin's-le-Grand being rather more advanced, the letter was re-endorsed: 'This is for the Bishop of Lincoln,' and so eventually reached his Lordship's hands."

THE Rev. W. Carlile, honorary secretary of the Church Army, has not relinquished his control of that society, nor has it ever been his intention to do so. On the contrary, he has been preparing for some time past the extension of the 'Tramps' and Inebriates' Labor Home Scheme throughout the country. The first of these homes has been working most successfully since last January. It is true that Mr. Carlile has accepted a small country parish near London, at the request of two London doctors, in order to retain his regained health. As the former incumbent only received about £90 last year, the financial gain to Mr. Carlile is merely nominal. His health being nearly restored, he will continue to take as great an interest as ever in the Church Army work.

A CORRESPONDENT of one of the Bristol papers says that Bishop Elliott is still able, at seventy-two years of age, to enjoy a day's skating. "When his Lordship was staying for some time one severe winter with a family in the country several miles from the church at which he was to preach, the roads were in such a state one morning that it was difficult to ride or drive. Fortunately, Dr. Ellicott had brought his skates as well as his sermon, and in a short time all three, we mean the Bishop, the sermon, and the skates, were making good time over the ice of the neighboring canal, and his Lordship was one of the first at the morning service, preached a thoughtful sermon, and at the close of the devotions, he skated back to dinner with good digestion waiting on appetite, and the blessing of the Church on both."

A CEREMONIAL incident, which is without parallel in modern times, was witnessed on a recent Sunday morning at St. Paul's, a Lord Mayor communicating in his robes of office, accompanied by his sheriff. The occasion (which was certainly the first for a quarter of a century, as Sir Reginald Hanson communicated on entry into office, and Sir Robert Fowler frequently, but never in robes), was a sermon by the Lord Mayor's brother, who is also his chaplain, and the Lord Mayor and the sheriff came to the church walking, and proceeded to the Lord Mayor's vestry, where they robed before and unrobed after the service. The sword-bearer and the mace-bearer did not attend, nor were the State carriages brought out. Lord Mayor Savory, who is chairman of the executive committee of the Liddon Memorial, is proud of having been for some time a lay preacher in the Church of England, and Mr. H. S. Foster, who is a candidate for the shrievalty next year, is equally energetic, while his brother is a well-known Lcw Church clergyman at Hastings. The Rev. H. Macnamara was the Celebrant, and Canon Scott Holland assisted in communicating the civic visitors, who were preceded by the dean's verger.

At the meeting of the Board of Managers of Missions, Feb. 10th, communications were received from the secretary of the House of Bishops conveying the action of the House in forming the missionary jurisdiction of Oklahoma, the election of a missionary bishop for Japan, and the deputat on of the Bishop of South Dakota as its representative to proceed to Japan at once. The Rev. Mr. Cole, secretary of the Standing Committee, writes from Tokyo touching the General Synod of the Japanese Church, which is to be held in Easter week: "Our next synod is going to discuss grave questions about the Japanese Church. 'Rule' is in the way now and we cannot but expect that our Christians will wish to regulate all the workings of the Church. Were they fully ready to do so, gladly would we leave it all to them; but we fear they may go beyond their depth. Would that we could have a bishop who could speak the mind of the American Church which, without false pride we may say, has great influence over the native Church and stands in a position to mediate. The Standing Committee has no place in the canons of the native Church, but a duly delegated bishop they would hear and respect." It was announced that it was Bishop Hare's purpose to leave in time for attendance upon this synod. Other business of a routine character was transacted.

CHICAGO.

WM. E. McLAREN, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop.

CITY.—All Saints' church, 757 N. Clark St., has a daily Celebration during Lent, at 6:45 A. M.; Evening Prayer at 4:30 P. M. each day; Evening Prayer repeated at 7:45 with sermon on Tuesdays and Fridays, and two Celebrations each Sunday. The Eucharistic vestments have been introduced at All Saints.

Some mention has been made in these columns of the improvements in progress at St. Peter's. The chapel is intended to be ultimately used solely as a Sunday school room and parish hall, there being adjoining space, 67x125, left vacant as the site for the permanent church. The building is 35 feet wide by 88 in length, and is built of plain brick with heavy trimmings of Anderson pressed brick. There is a high and well lighted basement, where a study for the rector, and commodious guild rooms, with well appointed store-rooms, closets, etc., have been fitted up. The chancel has been enlarged so as to afford accommodations for a choir of 40 voices, and a vested choir is to be introduced at Easter. There are now sittings for over 300 people, and when necessary, on extra occasions, the church is capable of holding over 400 without discomfort. The building as it stands, has cost about $6,500, and the lot, which has a frontage of 103 feet on Belmont Ave., near Evanston Ave., cost $10,000; while the indebtedness on the entire property, after the payments on various subscriptions and promises now outstanding, have been received, will be reduced to less than $5,000. Mr. George Beaumont was the architect, and it is largely owing to his careful supervision that so much has been done with a comparatively small sum of money. There is especial cause for gratification to both rector and people in the fact that the congregations seem to have grown simultaneously with the enlargement of the building, while the pews are being rented at a rate which will, with the increased collections, provide a surplus revenue sufficient to wipe out the indebtedness in the course of two or three years. While speaking of St. Peter's, it may be proper to say that the recent rumors that the rector, Mr. Edsall, had accepted a call to St. Louis, were entirely incorrect, and that he is to remain at his present post.

NEW YORK.

HENRY C. POTTER, D.D., LL.D., Bishop.

CITY.—On Ash Wednesday, Bishop Potter visited and preached at St. Thomas' church. The church was well filled.

On the first Sunday in Lent, a course of lectures was begun under the auspices of the Church Club, the object being to deal with the distinctive principles of revealed religion in contrast with the special truths of natural religion, and the title selected is "Catholic Dogma." The series was opened by Bishop Littlejohn, who took for his topic, "The Nature of Dogma and its Obligation." Lectures will follow on succeeding Lenten Sunday evenings, by the Rev. John W. Shackelford, D.D., on "Holy Trinity;" the Rev. Alfred G. Mortimer, D.D., on "The Incarnation;" the Rev. John A. Elliott, D.D., on "The Atonement;" the Rev. Davis Sessums, on "The Office and Work of the Holy Spirit;" and the Rev. G. S. H. Walpole, on "Grace and the Sacramental System."

The Rev. W. S. Rainsford, D.D., preached the annual sermon, Feb. 8th, before the students of Yale University.

On Quinquagesima Sunday a largely attended missionary service was held in St. George's church, at which addresses were made by Bishop Leonard, of Nevada and Utah, Archdeacon Perry, of Tennessee, and the Rev. Dr. Langford. During Lent, a series of special lectures will be delivered on Friday evenings by prominent preachers of "other religious bodies," including, Drs. A. F. Schauffler, Henry Van Dyke, and T. T. Munger, of New York, Professor Briggs, of the Union Theological Seminary, the Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., Dr. Lyman Abbott, of Brooklyn, and Dr. Washington Gladden, of Cleveland, O.

The first anniversary of the installation of Seth Low, LL.D., as President of Columbia College, occurred last week. During the year he has inaugurated a number of radical changes, all of them in the direction of uniting the separate faculties into the working unity of a true university. Beginning simply as King's College, under a royal charter, before the war of the American Revolution, university departments have been added, one by one, until, while still retaining the name of college, Columbia has become in point of scholarly facilities and number of students, one of the greatest universities in the world. The various departments have, however, continued to work separately from each other and not even a common "Commencement" was held till last year. One of the first acts of President Low was to establish a university council for the purpose of binding the faculties together and promoting unity of action for a common aim. The latest step marks the present anniversary, in the announcement that the College of Physicians and Surgeons has come under the control of this university council, and become an actual instead of, as formerly, a nominal department of Columbia. Not long since, the Vanderbilt family, who are members of St. Bartholomew's parish, gave this medical school a magnificent equipment of buildings, and it ranks now as one of the foremost scientific foundations in the country. President Low's dream of a powerful and genuine university, under the auspices of the Church, bids fair to be realized. The Rev. Dr. Henry Y. Satterlee has succeeded the Rev. Dr. Van De Water as college chaplain for the month of February, and has already made a good impression upon the students. Attendance upon the services of the chapel, under the new voluntary system, has much increased.

A singular, but certainly very appropriate feature, of the present Lenten-tide in New York churches, is the tendency to courses of lectures on subjects other than moral and devotional. With increased spiritual privileges, many of the churches are offering courses of instruction on topics pertaining to the Church and her ways, in obedience to the new canon which requires such instruction. Thus the Rev. Dr. Dix will deliver a Lenten course on "The Authority of the Church as set forth in the Book of Common Prayer, Articles, and Canons," the topics being "The Church as described in her own Formularies;" "The Teaching Church—Ecclesia Docens;" "The Christian Priesthood;" "Apostolic Succession;" "Christian and non-Christian Morals;" "The Outlook for Christian Unity." At the church of the Incarnation, the Rev. Arthur Brooks will lecture Wednesday mornings on "Church History," and Friday evenings on "The Prayer Book." The Rev. Dr. Wm. R. Huntington will preach Sunday afternoons at Grace church, on "Popular Misconceptions of the Episcopal Church." At the church of the Beloved Disciple, the rector will deliver Friday night addresses on "The Church and the Prayer Book." At St. James' church, the topic, Wednesdays, will be "The Creed," and a singular topic will be treated by the Rev. Henry Mottet at the church of the Holy Communion, Fridays. The Rev. Dr. Van De Water will lecture Sunday evenings on "The English Church before A. D. 600."

On Quinquagesima Sunday, St. Chrysostom's chapel was the scene of an unusual and interesting service. It was the celebration of the Holy Communion according to the Armenian ritual, for a congregation of Armenians gathered from different parts of the city. The Celebrant was Bishop Horsep Saragian, who was commissioned some time since to look after the spiritual interests of his race in America, by the Armenian Patriarch of Constantinople. He officiates under a license of the Bishop of New York, and makes a monthly visit for the purpose, coming on from New England, where he has a congregation of Armenians in the neighborhood of Boston, under a license, it is understood, of the Bishop of Massachusetts. At the service in question, Bishop Saragian was robed in the sourchar or cope, heavy with gold embroidery, and wore the sagbavard or crown-shaped mitre. He was assisted by a deacon, the Rev. H. Ivadian. The service was in the ancient Armenian language, entirely choral, and was exceedingly impressive. The congregation, numbering 200 or 300 persons, was very devout. Armenian services are held at St. Chrysostom's chapel regularly every Sunday at 1:30 P. M. The hour is inconvenient, but is necessitated by the assembling of the Sunday school two hours later, so that there is barely time for the two services during the afternoon.

On Shrove Tuesday a special musical service was held at Calvary church. The choir of the church, enlarged for the occasion, beautifully rendered Stainer's "Daughter of Jairus" and Mendelssohn's "Hear My Prayer."

GENERAL THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.—The Lenten season actually began at the Seminary with a meeting of the Fortnightly Club, on Friday, Feb. 6, when the paper was read by Mr. W. W. Moir, of the senior Class, on "The Lenten Fast." At the church of the Transfiguration, on Shrove Tuesday, was given, at 3 o'clock P. M., the first of a series of meditations for the students of the seminary. The first, which was well attended, was by the Rev. A. G. Mortimer, D.D., on "Lent, the Preparation for Easter Communion." The others will be Feb. 17, the Rev. J. O. S. Huntington, O. H. C., on "The Religious Life;" Feb. 25, the Rev. W. W. Webb, on "The Sacerdotal Character;" March 4, the Rev. G. H. Houghton, D.D., on "Fasting;" March 11, the Rev. Arthur Ritchie, on "Sacramental Confession;" March 18, the Rev. J. W. Williams, on "The Life Work of the Priest;" March 24, the Rev. O. S. Prescott, on "Holy Week." Ash Wednesday, all recitations were suspended, and there was a Celebration in the chapel at 7 A. M., Matins at 9, and Evensong at 5. Both Drs. Jewett and Richey, who for some days past have been incapacitated from work, are once more at their posts. On Friday evening of last week a number of the senior class met the clergy of St. George's church, at invitation of the rector, the Rev. Dr. Rainsford. The Rev. Professor Walpole was present. Supper was served, Dr. Rainsford giving the students a very cordial welcome. The reception took place in the rooms of the new clergy house of the parish.

EDGEWATER.—St. Paul's Day is the anniversary of St. Paul's church, and it was celebrated this year, as usual, by special musical services. There was a high choral Celebration at 11 o'clock, the service being Woodward in E-flat. The Bishop preached on the conversion of St. Paul. In the evening there was an elaborate service of anthems, under the direction of Mr. H. G. Bunnett, organist and choirmaster of St. Paul's. A shortened form of Even song was sung by the rector, the Rev. H. N. Wayne. The vested choir was assisted by Messrs. Bispham, Vanderbogart, Dana, Noble, and Cone, of New York, and Miss Zorn, Mrs. Bunnett, and Mrs. McMurray, of Staten Island. The programme, which was well rendered throughout, was as follows: Chorus, "God came from Teman," Steggall; duet, "Now we are ambassadors" (St. Paul), Mendelssohn, Messrs. Vanderbogart and Dana; solo, "Rejoice greatly" (Messiah), Handel, Miss Zorn; chorus, "It came even to pass," Ouseley; solo, "Thus saith the Lord of Hosts" (Holy City), Gaul, Mr. C. W. Bispham; chorus, "Hallel jah" (Mount of Olives), Beethoven.

PENNSYLVANIA.

OZI W. WHITAKER, D.D., Bishop.

The Rev. John B. Clemson, D. D., the senior presbyter of the diocese, entered into eternal rest on the evening of Feb. 3rd, at West Chester, Penn; the immediate cause of his death was pneumonia. He was born in 1803, graduated at Princeton, class of 1822, after which he commenced the study of theology with the late Rev. Geo. Boyd, D.D., of St. John's church, (Northern Liberties), Philadelphia, and subsequently in the Alexandria, Va., Seminary. He was orained at the age of 25 in St. Stephen's church, Phila., by Bishop White, and is the last of the clergy who received Holy Orders at the hands of that distinguished prelate. His first charge was at St. Stephen's church, Harrisburg, from thence he removed to a point near Wilmington, Del., where he established a manual labor school in connection with a seminary for preparing young men for the ministry; among his pupils was the late Rev. Dr. Richard Newton. In 1837 he became rector of the church of the Ascension, Phila., where he remained eight years, and thence was called to the charge of the church of the Holy Trinity, West Chester, of which he was rector until his removal to Claymont, Del., in 1853. In 1882, being then in his 80th year, he returned to West Chester, where he married Miss Hannah Gibbons. The funeral services were held at noon, Feb. 7th, in the church of the Holy Trinity, West Chester, and the remains were interred at a later hour in Laurel Hill cemetery, Philadelphia.

The Convocation of Norristown was held Feb. 3rd, in Christ church, Pottstown, the Rev. C. L. Cooder, rector. There was a good attendance of both clergy and laity; among the former, the Rev. Dr. Appleton of Cheltenham, who presided, and led the discussion on local missionary work in Montgomery county. At the evening session, the Rev. S. Snelling made an interesting address on the Sunday school, and its influences in enlarging the sphere of Church work. A discussion on Domestic Missions succeeded, during which the Rev. A. A. Marple made an effective address.

The 35th annual meeting of the contributors to the Church Home for Children was held Feb. 3rd, in the chapel of the church of the Holy Trinity, Phila., the Rev. Dr. McVickar in the chair, when the report of the Board of Managers was read. Legacies received during the year were stated as follows: From estate of J. V. Williamson, $23,750; from Elizabeth C. Halliday, $6,918.83; and from Geo. S. Pepper $9,525. The treasurer of the Board of Council showed the receipts to have been $51,960; payments, $46,961.50.

The annual meeting of the Board of Managers of the Educational Home occurred Feb. 5th, when the report for the year was submitted. There are 105 Indians and 13 white boys on the roll; the Indians are taken from the ages of 6 to 18 years, and none of them have sympathized with their ghost-dancing fathers. Daniel Dorchester, superintendent of Indian Schools, stated that out of 13 prizes given recently at the public school, 9 of the highest were taken by Indians. The health record is excellent; no death had occurred for five years. The boys are taught to be quiet, industrious, and thrifty, and many have had places provided with merchants, manufacturers, and farmers. The receipts of the year were reported as $6,512.73; cash on hand from 1889, $38,339.20; expenditures $37,142.38; balance Jan. 31, 1891, $7,709.65. Bishop Whitaker is ex-officio president of the Board.

Over 18,000 boxes have been taken by 105 Sunday schools of the diocese for use during Lent, for the collection of funds for missionary purposes.

PHILADELPHIA.—At the invitation of the Clerical Brotherhood, Bishop Whitaker delivered a pre-Lenten address at the celebration of the Holy Communion at the church of the Epiphany, on Monday, Feb. 9th.

Ash Wednesday was a bright, clear day, and the churches were largely attended.

United Lenten services will be held in Germantown, during the present season, when addresses will be delivered by the rectors of the different churches on the Ten Commandments. Eight parishes will take part in these services, which will take place generally on Friday evenings, except Good Friday.

The Rev. Father Page, superior-general of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, was expected to sail Feb. 11th, on a visit to this country; one of his objects being to visit St. Clement's church, Philadelphia, and settle the question whether the clergy of the order are to remain there. The great need of priests to engage in Church work in England, may necessitate the withdrawal of those now in charge of St. Clement's. The people there are anxious that at least Father Field should remain with them.

Efforts are being made to raise funds for the erection of a new parish house for the Sunday school of St. John's free church. The school has largely outgrown its present quarters, and more room is imperatively demanded.

The executors' account of the estate of Mrs. Rebecca T. Willing, was adjudicated and confirmed by the Orphans' Court, Feb. 11th, whereby the amount on hand was ordered to be distributed. Among the many charitable legacies may be named the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society of the P. E. C.; Christ church Hospital; the trustees of the P. E. C. in trust for the free chapel of the Reconciliation; the P. E. City Mission for the Consumptives' Home and Sick Diet Kitchens; and to the rector of St. Peter's for the parish school, each $5,000; these amounts are subject to the collateral inheritance tax of five per cent. And if the estate is sufficient to pay the various amounts specified in the will, a further amount of $1,000 is to be handed over to each of the above-named institutions.

WEST MISSOURI.

EDWARD R. ATWILL, D.D., Bishop.

The Northern Convocation met at Chillicothe (70 miles northeast of Kansas City), in Grace church, the Rev. S. M. Holden, rector, Jan. 27-28. The Holy Communion was celebrated on both days by the Bishop. The first day was spent in devotional exercises. During the day the Bishop twice addressed the clergy on their peculiar temptations and the best way to meet them. The morning address was followed by prayers supplicatory and intercessory in addition to the prescribed and usual services. In the afternoon an address was made by the Rev. Henry L. Foote, respecting encouragements in our labors. In the evening the sermon was preached by the Rev. Robert Talbot on true spiritual greatness. After the Holy Communion on Wednesday the convocation met for business, and spent the morning in considering mission work now going on or to be done in Kansas City and in a number of towns within the limits of the convocation. In the afternoon an essay was read by the Rev. J. W. Birchmore, on Rev. xi: 13, 14, subject, "The earthquake during the Season of the Second Woe," viz., the Reformation. Then followed a conversation on the utility of a diocesan missionary to work within the convocation limits, a subject to be discussed at the next meeting. The services were well attended in spite of rainy weather. After Evening Prayer had been said, addresses were made by the Rev. Messrs. Foote, Talbot, and Sellers, and by the Rev. Dr. Mann, on the divine organization of the Church, on some of its usages, and as being a missionary body; all of which were practical and were heard with great interest. Then the convocation closed, having been hospitably entertained and mutually profited.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

WM. HOBART HARE, D.D., Bishop.

The Bishop has issued the following letter:
NEW YORK, 22 BIBLE HOUSE }
Feb. 4th, 1891. }

To the Clergy and Laity of the Missionary District of South Dakota.

DEAR BRETHREN:—Affairs took a turn to-day in the House of Bishops to me most unexpected, and so likely to be misunderstood, that I feel I should communicate at once with my dear fellow-helpers in South Dakota.

As is well known, Japan has for a number of years offered a field for missionary enterprise of extraordinary promise, and ecclesiastical affairs are now approaching a crisis there, which will, in all probability, make this an epoch in the history of the Church. This particular field of missionary enterprise has occupied, therefore, not a little of the time and attention of the House of Bishops for a number of years, and especially at its meeting in New York in 1889, and again in Pittsburgh in 1890. Its needs were the occasion of the gathering together of the Bishops this week.

The conclusion was reached by the Bishops that one of their own number should be sent to Japan without delay, to act there in their behalf and as their representative. I was selected to perform this duty. The obstacles in the way of my acceptance seemed to me insurmountable, in view of the ordeal through which the South Dakota Mission has lately been passing: depressed in the Eastern Deanery by the results of an extraordinary drought, and strangled in the Niobrara Deanery by an outbreak of wild life. This exigency the Bishops did not overlook, but, surveying the whole field of the work of the Church, they were of opinion that I should give a number of months to Japan, and they urged their wish upon me in a unanimous vote and in terms of brotherly affection and confidence, which made it practically impossible for me to refuse to be guided by their will.

My heart is with you, my dear brethren, to live and die with you, but, all things considered, the resolution of the House of Bishops came to me almost as if it had begun with the words adopted by a council of the Church in the early days: "It seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us"—I could not but obey it.

I expect to return to Sioux Falls about the middle of February, and to start for Japan early in March.

My absence will, I fear, entail inconvenience upon you, dear brethren of the clergy and laity, but you will bear them with patience and cheerfulness, and make up for my lack of service, by special zeal and fidelity, for the sake of the Church, the body of Christ, in which all the members, whether in South Dakota, in Japan, or elsewhere, are one. You will also spare me. I am sure, in these ensuing weeks of preparation for my new duties, all demands upon my time, except those which are most urgent, and let me rest assured, in my absence, that every one of you, clerical and lay, will, in his own vocation and ministry, stand fast in his place, so that I may find you on my return in unbroken rank, and the work of the Lord prospering in your hands.

I hope to communicate to you later the provision which will be made for the management of the ecclesiastical affairs and the missionary work of the Jurisdiction.

Your affectionate Friend and Bishop,
WILLIAM H. HARE.

HENRY M. LITTLE JACKSON, D.D., Assistant Bishop.

ANNISTON.—The Rev. Wm. D. Martin, the rector-elect of the church of St. Michael and All Angels, entered upon his duties on Sexagesima Sunday, Feb. 1st. The Rev. E. A. Hoffman, D.D., dean of the General Theological Seminary, N. Y., was present, reading the lesson and assisting in the celebration of the Holy Communion. At night the congregation united with that of Grace church, the Rev. P. H. Fitts, rector, and the Rev. Mr. Martin being the preacher. The 60th council of the diocese of Alabama, appointed for May 19th, is to be held in the church of St. Michael and All Angels.

WESTERN NEW YORK.

ARTHUR CLEVELAND COXE, D.D., LL.D., Bishop.

The sectional meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary held in St. James' parish, Buffalo, Jan. 28 and 29, was one of more than usual interest. The session opened with an informal meeting, held in the rectory, of the women interested in the Junior Auxiliary, at which time Miss Mary Hart, of Rochester, chairman of the Junior Committee, gave an interesting talk on this all-important work. Following close upon this was a meeting of the children in the church, when a letter was read by the rector, the Rev. Chas. Smith, from Mrs. Burt, wife of the Rev. H. Burt, of Yanktonaise Mission, Crow Creek Agency. Graphic accounts of life among the Indians, and missionary work among the Chinese, were then given by Bishop Hare, of Southern Dakota, and Mrs. Graves, wife of the Rev. F. R. Graves, our missionary to China. A general missionary meeting was held in the evening, and most interested attention was paid to the addresses made by Bishop Hare, Bishop Cox, President E. N. Potter, of Hobart college, and the Rev. Henry A. Adams. Holy Communion was celebrated on Thursday morning, following which was the business meeting of the Auxiliary. The goodly numbers present at all the services spoke volumes for the interest felt in the missionary work.

SOUTHERN OHIO.

BOYD VINCENT, S.T.D., Bishop.

DAYTON.—Ash Wednesday morning Bishop Whitehead, of Pittsburgh, visited Christ church, the Rev. Herbert J. Cook, rector, acting for Bishop Vincent. He administered the rite of Confirmation to a class of 16 persons, two being absent by reason of illness. The musical part of the service, suited to the day, was rendered by the choir of 20 men and boys, being about half the usual number on Sundays. The congregation, which was a large one, listened, with great interest to the Bishop's earnest and pointed discourse. It is reported that the Assistant Bishop of the diocese is making a good recovery from typhoid fever and hopes to return from Europe in April.

LOUISIANA.

JOHN N. GALLEHER, S.T.D., Bishop.

The senior warden, the Hon. J. P. Hornor of St. Anna's church, New Orleans, the Rev. E. W. Hunter, rector, presented to the vestry in December last a handsome pair of brass candlesticks and some wax candles to be used upon the altar. The vestry unanimously accepted them provided the Bishop would consent to their use. To an enquiry as to their lawfulness, the Bishop replied as follows:

"In reply to your inquiry concerning the use of altar lights, I write to say that any doubt in regard to such use would seem to be settled for the Anglican Communion by the late judgment of the Archbishop of Canterbury, in the case of the Bishop of Lincoln. He has decided that they are legitimate and legal, according to the law and use of the Church in England. So they are in the Church in the United States. They have no more connection with the distinctive tenets of the Church of Rome than they have with Buddhism or Mohammedanism. It is to be noted that almost everything in use, the surplice, the church bell, stained glass, vested choirs, the Prayer Book, Confirmation, ordination, etc., have been stigmatized by the Puritan spirit as being 'Romish.' When the Te Deum was first sung in Trinity church, New York, complaint was made formally to Bishop Hobart of this alleged Romish innovation. 'So that I feel no force in such criticism about anything that cannot justify itself on better grounds. Altar lights are used in this diocese with my consent. Their symbolism, if any one can say what it is, seems to be free from objection. While giving you my judgment in this matter, I have to ask that the great law of charity be always observed, and if there be difference of opinion and feeling in any congregation, let kind discretion be exercised so that the family of Christ be not disturbed.

J. N. GALLEHER,
Bishop of Louisiana.

This straightforward letter of the Bishop is through the medium of THE LIVING CHURCH, circulated throughout St. Anna's parish. Many churches in the diocese of Louisiana use altar lights, namely, St. Mark's, Shreveport; Grace, Monroe; St. James', Baton Rouge; Ascension, Donalds-ville; Grace, Bayou Sara; Trinity, Morgan City; St. John's, De Vallo; and Grace church, New Orleans, has a handsome pair of brass candlesticks upon the altar. Altar lights are used now in almost every diocese in the Union; there are many churches using them. It is not likely the altar lights will be used at St. Anna's until Easter for although the Bishop has written favorably upon the subject, and the vestry has unanimously accepted them, it is thought best to wait until Easter so there will be no difference of opinion. The rector of St.

Anna's kindly offers to receive and forward subscriptions to THE LIVING CHURCH. (Subscription price $2.00 a year.)

The Feast of the Conversion of St. Paul was celebrated by St. Paul's Brotherhood, with an anniversary service in St. Paul's church on that night. Addresses were delivered by the Rev. E. W. Hunter and the Rev. H. H. Waters, while an interesting article was read by Mr. Wilmer Gresham.

GEORGIA.

The Rev. R. S. Barrett of Atlanta, Ga., held an eight days' Mission during January at St. Jude's church, Brunswick, assisted by the Rev. H. K. Rees, and the Rev. D. Watson Winn, priest in charge. The parts of the city about St. Jude's church, comprising about 350 white families, had been thoroughly canvassed by the clergyman in charge and some ladies of his and St. Mark's congregation, and every one had an opportunity of hearing this special message from God to them. The attendance was not as large as it should have been for the reason that three days before the Mission began, "La Grippe" broke out in Brunswick, and spread so rapidly that there was not one house in six without sickness. In spite, however, of this drawback, the average congregation was very good, and at some of the night services the church was full. The singing was exceptionally well done, the whole congregation taking part, while the members of the choir sat about amongst the people, hearty tunes that all could sing being used. As a result of the answer to the question: "What can a busy layman do?" there was started a chapter of St. Andrew's Brotherhood, not as a parochial organ for St. Jude's church, but for that and St. Mark's jointly, and for the work of the Church throughout this city. The missionary's lectures on the parables were full of earnest and helpful thought, and there is no doubt that the seed sown will spring up and bear fruit. Even at this early stage the good results of the Mission are seen in many quiet ways, and there is the promise of much permanent good to follow. The Mission was closed by the Bishop of Florida, who after the evening service and sermon by Mr. Barrett, confirmed two persons presented by the priest in charge; the city clergy all took part in the closing services.

MILWAUKEE.

CYRUS F. KNIGHT, D.D., D.C.L., Bishop.

CITY.—Plans for the new school house and guild hall for All Saints' cathedral, have been finally approved. They are drawn by Mr. W. D. Kimball, of Milwaukee. The location and architecture of the new buildings are arranged with a view toward eventually building a transept on the west of the cathedral, which will be connected with the buildings now to be erected. The cathedral trustees now own a full block front on Juneau avenue, with a half block depth on Marshall and Cass streets, in the best portion of the city. The cathedral stands on the eastern portion of the property. Adjoining the prospective left transept, but 75 feet back from the street, will be built the new school house and the guild hall. Eventually, the new deanery will be erected at the west end of the block, on the site of the present frame building, and the three new buildings will then form a handsome quadrangle, with an arched entrance from the street, and, inside, a garden with fountain, etc. The area of ground already owned and available for this purpose, is 255 feet on Juneau avenue, and 180 feet deep. The building to be erected now, is only the combined school house and guild hall, the former of which is given as a memorial by Mrs. P. J. Bosworth. The building will be of Gothic architecture, cream brick, 84 feet wide by 75 feet deep. There are two main entrances. That to the left leads into the school, to which two stories are devoted, arranged for class rooms, study halls, etc., with a gymnasium in the basement. The right entrance leads into the guild hall, which, on the ground floor, contains assembly rooms, which may be thrown into one, or closed into several, and also suitable choir rooms, with rooms for other local guilds and societies. The second floor will be a large assembly room. The guild hall and school building will be completely separated by a solid brick wall, except for a fire exit from one to the other on the second floor, with a fire-proof door. Work will be commenced as soon as practicable, and, when completed, the diocesan property, already very valuable, will be one to rival any cathedral establishment in the country. There will be a tablet with the statement of the memorial.

MADISON.—A handsome eagle lectern of brass has been presented to Grace church, at a cost of $300, in memory of Bishop Welles.

JANESVILLE.—A five-days Mission was held at Trinity church, with marked results, the missionary being Archdeacon Webber. There being no rector at Christ church, in the same city, the parishioners of that church were also in regular attendance. The final address, on the subject, "Why?" gave distinctive teaching on everything concerning the Church, and was heard by a large congregation which completely crowded the building. The archdeacon commenced a Mission at St. Luke's church, Racine, on Ash Wednesday evening.

KENOSHA.—A pre-Lenten retreat for the Sisters was conducted at Kemper Hall by Father Hall immediately before Quinquagesima. A quiet day for women was conducted on the Monday following, by Dean Williams, of Milwaukee, whose meditations were deeply devotional, and must have done much good to his hearers.

KENTUCKY.

THOS. U. DUDLEY, D. D., D. C. L., Bishop.

Bishop Dudley announces the following changes in his list of appointments:

MARCH.

10—11. Cynthiana. 12—13. Paris.
28. Ascension Mission, Louisville.

LOUISVILLE.—Christ church Sunday school children, having succeeded in raising $300, a sum sufficient to endow a "Child's bed," in the Church Home and Infirmary, made a visit to that institution in a body, to make the presentation, at the same time making it a donation party by presenting individual gifts of flour, sugar, coffee, tea, etc.

Calvary church, beginning Quinquagesima Sunday, will celebrate the Holy Communion every Sunday at 7:30 A.M. This service is now held by Christ, Grace, the church of the Advent, and St. Peter's church.

Christ church has resolved to resume their Sunday night services, which for a very long time past have been discontinued.

CONNECTICUT.

JOHN WILLIAMS, S.T.D., LL.D., Bishop.

SALISBURY.—The rector and parish of St. John are to be congratulated, for sufficient money has been raised to purchase a new organ, something that was very much needed in the work there. The organ will be in the church, ready for use, next Easter Day. It is made by George Jardine & Son, New York. Compass of great organ, CC to A, 58 notes; compass of swell organ, CC to A, 58 notes; compass of Pedal organ, CCC to A, 27 notes. It will have 15 stops, two manuals, and 397 pipes. The Rev. J. H. George has been in this parish for a number of years, and by steady, persevering work, has kept it abreast of the times, and carried on very successfully the work inaugurated by his predecessor, the Rev. Prof. Johnson, of the Berkeley Divinity school. In addition to this parish work, he has been secretary and treasurer of the archdeaconry, and is now the archdeacon. Both of these offices, in Connecticut, mean a great deal of extra work, especially when there are many missions and weak parishes to be looked after and helped. The care of these largely devolves on them, thus the labors of the Bishop are lightened, and the work carefully supervised. Each archdeacon is a general missionary in his own jurisdiction, and while the Bishop surrenders none of his authority, and loses none of his interest, yet he gains the assistance of one who is on the ground and knows thoroughly the exigencies of every parish and station.

F. D. HUNTINGTON, S.T.D., LL.D., Bishop.

In reference to the new Grace church, Watertown, a description of which was given in our issue of Jan. 31st, we note that the arrangement of the entire interior was in the hands of the Messrs. J. & R. Lamb, of New York. Not only did they execute the furniture in carved oak, the metal work, and the elaborate mural paintings of adoring angels in the reredos, but the entire stained glass in rich and harmonious color, as well, thus making a unity of effect throughout the entire building.

RUTHERFORD.—On Thursday, Feb. 5, the opening and blessing of the enlargement of Grace church took place. At 11 A. M. the Bishop, Archdeacons of Jersey City and Newark, with about 20 priests and deacons, assembled with the new vested choir, in the Sunday school room, which the Bishop blessed, then, preceded by his chaplain, bearing the pastoral staff, the two Archdeacons and the rector, the Rev. Francis J. Clayton, he, in turn, blessed the choir-room and the sacristy. The procession then marched up into the church, which, upon the formal request of the rector, in the name of "the rector, wardens, and vestrymen of Grace church," was likewise blessed. The celebration of the Eucharist followed, the Bishop being the celebrant. The sermon was preached by the Rev. E. D. Tomkins who preached at the opening service of the present building, 18 years ago. The service was choral, from Garrett in F. Ten members of the vested choir of St. George's, Brooklyn, assisted. At 3:30 P. M. the Archdeaconry of Jersey City met at the rectory, and held their regular business meeting. At 8 P. M. a choral evening service was held, and addresses were made by the Bishop of Utah and Nevada, and the Rev. W. S. Gilchrist.

The enlargement consists of transepts 12-12 feet deep and 25 feet wide, and a chancel 30 feet wide and 25 feet deep, making the entire length of the church 100 feet long by 30 feet wide, with a seating capacity of over 300.

MASSACHUSETTS.

BENJ. H. PADDOCK, S. T. D., Bishop.

BOSTON.—The Rev. Dr. Lindsay, rector of St. Paul's church, has started a Sunday school for the benefit of the Back Bay children at the Hotel Vendome. Mr. E. T. Sullivan, of Detroit, is the superintendent and the school numbers 20 children.

Mr. J. C. D. Parker, the organist of Trinity church, has resigned, and Mr. Henry M. Aiken has been appointed in his place. This latter gentleman has sung in the choir of Trinity church for 47 years.

The Lenten services at St. Paul's church will be more than usually attractive this year. The Rev. Phillips Brooks, D.D., preaches on Mondays to men only; the Rev. William M. Groton, on Tuesdays; the Rev.

A. St. John Chambre, D.D., on Wednesdays; the Rev. John S. Lindsay, D.D., on Thursdays; the Rev. A. C. A. Hall, on Fridays, and the Rev. Henry Bedinger, on Saturdays.

The Unitarians and Congregationalists in some particular way will observe Lent, and a schedule of services has been published and circulated. At King's Chapel there will be a half-hour service every Wednesday noon during Lent, and during Holy Week, daily service at 3 P. M. On Maunday Thursday there will be Communion at 8 P. M., and on Good Friday, service at 11 A. M. There are similar services at the South Congregational church during the penitential season.

GLOUCESTER.—The Rev. A. Watkins, rector of St. John's church, is making an earnest effort to purchase property adjoining the church for a sailors' home. His work is largely among fishermen and their needs would be met by this acquisition. It seems very desirable that he should be helped in this work, because the class of fishermen he has to deal with, are poorer than the sailors who arrive at East Boston, where the City Board of Missions has recently erected St. Mary's Home.

BROCTON.—The Rev. Samuel Hodgkiss has resigned the charge of this important field after a service of eight years and seven months, and resolutions have been adopted by the diocesan Board of Missions testifying to the valued labors of this clergyman, and his self-sacrificing, judicious leadership through a critical time in the life of the parish.

CAMBRIDGE.—The Rev. Edward Abbott, D.D., rector of St. James' church, will take a six months' leave of absence from his parish and go abroad. St. James' church, which is now the largest in the city, possesses a fine edifice, parish house, and a chapel, upon which there is a debt of $18,000. This is the only parish Dr. Abbott has had since his withdrawal from the Congregationalist ministry, and he has been mainly instrumental in the growth of the Church in this part of Cambridge.

The board of preachers for Harvard College is now composed of one Unitarian, two Episcopalians, one Congregationalist and one Presbyterian.

SALEM.—The will of the late Mrs. Elizabeth M. Proctor bequeaths $25 each to the Episcopal City Mission of Boston, the Diocesan Board of Missions, and the Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Deceased Clergymen of the diocese.

LONG ISLAND.

ABRAM N. LITTLEJOHN, D. D., LL.D., Bishop.

BROOKLYN.—The Wednesday evening services at the church of the Reformation during Lent will be conducted by members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

The 39th anniversary of the Church Charity Foundation of the diocese was celebrated on the evening of Quinquagesima Sunday in St. Ann's church. Bishop Littlejohn presided, and addresses were made by the Rev. Drs. Charles H. Hall and John G. Bacchus, and the Rev. Messrs Charles R. Baker and A. B. Kinsolving. The Rev. T. G. Jackson read the annual report, in which he referred to the completion of the house for the Sisterhood of St. John the Evangelist, and appealed for its endowment. He made grateful mention of the labors of the lady associates, and commended especially the work done at St. John's Hospital. During the year 200 patients have been admitted to the hospital, of whom more than two-thirds were nursed and cared for free of charge. 7,300 days of free treatment during the year. All but those considered hopeless, entering, were cured or greatly relieved. Only 15 died. All patients applying with physicians' approval have been admitted, and, yet, the hospital is so commodious and well-appointed that many more could have been received. With the growth of the city, there is little doubt but that its capacity will soon be fully taxed. Daily prayer is offered in each ward, and the fact ever kept in mind that it is a Church institution, with the object of caring for the soul as well as for the body—the great principle upon which Dr. Muhlenberg founded St. Luke's Hospital, New York. The Superior, Sister Julia, was trained under Dr. Muhlenberg. The Orphanage now shelters 90 children. During the year 16 boys and 6 girls were admitted, and 18 boys and 8 girls passed out. The good management of Sister Elizabeth, who is in charge of this part of the work of the Foundation, is evinced in the remarkable health of its inmates. Of late, the chapel of the Orphanage has been re-decorated, and new and handsome stained glass put in. The Home for the Aged, in charge of Sister Emma, aided by Sisters Mary and Alice, cares for the old men and women. Notwithstanding its enlargement, the list of applicants awaiting admittance is largely in excess of the accommodations. None pass from this home save when the Father calls them to His own, and for this transition the decorously-ordered household and prevailing Christian sentiment are fitting preparations. During the year 11 have been admitted, and 7 have died. The present number of inmates is 61. The Orphans' Press, another branch of the Foundation, has become self-supporting in its task of training boys for the useful occupation of typesetting and printing. The condition of the buildings and property of the Foundation has never been more satisfactory. But the support does not increase with the enlarged demands upon the charity, and there is need of a larger measure of liberality in giving. The report closed with fitting tributes to three deceased members of the board of managers, the late Rev. Dr. D. V. M. Johnson, and Messrs. J. A. Hewlett, and Wm. H. Waring. The financial report indicated contributions for the general fund, amounting to $19,029.86, and disbursements of $21,185.32, leaving a deficit of $2,155.46. Receipts for the hospital fund additionally were $11,666.17, including balance in treasury at beginning of year, of $4,119.30. With hospital expenses of $6,447.23, a balance remained of $5,218.94. Of the endowment funds, the total amount reported last year was $159,642.49. This has been increased by $3,000, contributed for hospital endowment, and $4,486 for the general endowment, making a present total of $162,687.35. Additional endowment is greatly needed for the general fund.

Improvements and alterations have been made in the chapel of St. Ann's church, the Rev. Dr. R. F. Alsop, rector. In order better to carry on the parish work additional rooms have been made by cutting off a portion of the chapel. On either side of the hallway there are rooms for the assistant clergy, the sexton, the sewing societies and mission bands. These are neatly furnished and fitted up. The chapel is to be lighted by electricity.

At St. Luke's church the Rev. Edward A. Bradley, D. D., rector, a special series of Bible readings will be given by Miss Sarah Smiley, on the Wednesday afternoons of Lent, to which Churchmen in the several parishes of the city have been invited. The course began on the afternoon of Ash Wednesday.

Earnest laymen of the diocese have established the Clergymen's Family Fund Society which has become incorporated. The president is Mr. William G. Low; vice-president, Mr. Frederick C. Clark; treasurer, Hon. Wm. H. Fleeman; secretary, Mr. E. L. Walworth. The trustees comprise laymen from most of the leading parishes. The society is limited in its operations to this diocese. Its object is to enroll men and women in the several parishes who will pay an assessment of $2 each on the death of a clergyman and for the benefit of his family. Statistics warrant the belief that not more than two calls a year will be needed. The charter of the society restricts it from paying more than $5,000 on any one death. The persons to receive aid are to be those who are left needy, and were immediate relatives of clergyman dying while residents in and canonically connected with the diocese, and actively engaged for at least three years in ministerial or educational work of the Church therein, or who had been so engaged until prevented by death or disability.

SAG HARBOR.—A recent item regarding the good work doing at Christ church in raising $850 on account of the parish debt was partly unjust in withholding proper credit where credit is due. The generous efforts of the congregation were largely in consequence of the untiring energy of Mr. Gordon T. Lewis, a candidate for Holy Orders from the General Theological Seminary, New York, who has officiated as lay reader since last June, and under whose prudent and vigorous supervision the parish is prospering as never before.

PATZBORG.—The Rev. T. Stafford Drowne, D.D., secretary of the diocese, has been engaged to temporarily supply the services of St. Paul's church.

ROCKVILLE CENTRE.—The Wednesday evening services at the church of the Ascension during Lent will be conducted by various clergymen of New York and Brooklyn. The Rev. F. M. Kirkus officiated Ash Wednesday evening; Feb. 18th, the Rev. Dr. E. H. Jewett; Feb. 25th, the Rev. S. H. S. Ilderton; March 4th, the Rev. Wm. Wiley; March 11th, the Rev. U. T. Tracey; March 18th, Mr. F. S. Stickney, of the General Seminary. Rockville Centre is one of the most thriving towns on the south side of Long Island. The work here is called a "mission," but has always been self-supporting. It is at present carried on by a lay reader from the General Theological Seminary. The Very Rev. Dean Cox, Archdeacon of Queens County, is priest in charge.

MARYLAND.

WILLIAM PARET, D.D., LL.D., Bishop.

BALTIMORE.—The Convocation of Baltimore met in Grace church chapel on Thursday, Jan. 15th. The Bishop delivered an earnest missionary address. One of the topics discussed was "Work and Workers for Colored People in Maryland." An able paper was read by the Rev. H. S. Clapp, and Archdeacon Moran made an interesting address. Addresses were also made by the Rev. Messrs. C. E. Smith and J. E. Grammer.

The Rev. Dr. Geo. C. Currie, D.D., of New York, will officiate at Christ church until the return of the rector, the Rev. W. W. Williams, who is now in Florida for the benefit of his health.

On Sunday, Jan. 11, the Bishop preached and confirmed a class of 43 persons at Henshaw Memorial church, the Rev. Chas. Gauss, rector. A fund of $1,100 in hand toward erecting a new building, has been increased to $11,000.

Archdeacon Perry, of Tennessee, preached to a large congregation at St. Mary's chapel, Feb. 2nd. After the service, a reception was held. Archdeacon Perry was for 15 years in charge of St. Mary's. He has been appointed by Bishop Quintard to superintend the work among the colored people, and is also warden of Hoffman Hall in Nashville, Tenn.

The Bishop has appointed the Rev. R. Whittingham as missionary at Smithsburg, Mechanicstown, and Catocin Furnace.

Two ladies were received into the order of All Saints' Sisters on Jan. 23, at their house, at the corner of Madison ave. and Eutaw st.

The Protestant Episcopal Brotherhood of Baltimore gave a banquet at the St. James hotel, Tuesday, Jan. 27. Bishop Paret, ex-officio visitor and superintendent of the brotherhood, was present, and made the opening address, to which Edwin Higgins, president, responded in a cordial greeting to the Bishop, clergy, and members. There were about 102 guests present, of which about 33 were clergymen. The brotherhood was organized in 1861, and its first president was Mr. William Woodward, from whom a letter was read. The funds of the brotherhood at present amount to $5,500.

Stainer's cantata, "The Daughter of James," was sung by the vested choir of St. Luke's church, the Rev. W. A. Coale, rector, on Sexagesima Sunday, and the Wednesday evening following. The choir, which enjoys quite a reputation for the rendering of such compositions, consists of 30 men and boys, under the direction of Mr. C. C. Carter, the organist, to whom due credit must be given for the admirable rendition. The quality of tone in the trebles was particularly noticeable, their voices being pure, strong, and sweet. No outside assistance was obtained; the soloists, Mr. J. F. Riley, tenor, Dr. Funck, bass, and Master Thompson, soprano, being members of the choir. An immense congregation assembled to hear the work on Sunday afternoon, people standing outside long before the doors were opened. Shortened Evening Prayer was first sung, and the cantata was then given in a manner to satisfy both the musician and the Churchman. The choruses were, perhaps, the most remarkable feature; their solid tone, precision, and climacteric effects, thrilling the thronged and reverent congregation. During the offertory, Mr. Carter played Chopin's Funeral March. The offerings were for the choir expenses. Stainer's "Crucifixion," which is an annual event at St. Luke's, will be sung during Holy Week.

There has been a healthy revival of interest in all departments of Church work during the first year of the present rectorship. The Sunday school numbering 250, under the superintendency of Mr. W. B. Myer, meets in the parish building at 3 p. m., and goes in a body into church for Evensong and instruction at 4. The rector gives plain talks on Bible teachings in the parish building every Saturday night. The Parish Guild, now 20 years old, continues its quiet and useful work. The mothers' meetings are held every Tuesday, under the charge of Miss Mary Miller. The Provident Society, for helping the worthy poor, meets on Wednesdays. A branch of the Woman's Auxiliary has been organized with a large and active membership. St. Luke's Hall (Miss E. H. Crowe, principal), is considered one of the best private schools for young ladies in the city. The free parish school gives elementary education to little girls.

On Monday night, Feb. 2nd, the Waverly Club house was opened at 304 N. Carey st. The club owes its origin to the suggestion of the rector of St. Luke's, but is entirely independent and self-supporting. The club house is large and convenient, containing parlor, reading-room, rooms for billiards, games, and smoking, bath-room, and janitor's rooms. A gymnasium will soon be added. The club bids fair to be a great success, starting with over 250 charter members, most of them young Churchmen.

TOWSON.—It is designed to spend from $8,000 to $10,000 on the improvement of Trinity church. An addition will be built, which will have a capacity for about 230 persons.

MICHIGAN.

THOMAS F. DAVIES, D.D., LL.D., Bishop.

The Saginaw Valley Convocation met at Trinity church, Caro, the Rev. O. E. Fuller, rector, on Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 3rd and 4th. The Rev. Dr. Conover presided, and preached the opening sermon. The Rev. J. D. Stearns preached the sermon on Wednesday morning at 10:30 A.M., and Holy Communion was celebrated. At the business meeting at 3 P.M., very encouraging reports were heard from the different missionaries. The Rev. Isaac Barr presented his credentials from Bishop Davies as general missionary of the Saginaw Valley, and was appointed to exercise his functions, receiving salary, but to rely upon the offerings of the missions helped by the stipends for the remainder of the year, remaining from missions unoccupied, were granted the general missionary by convocation.

The troubles of All Saints' church, Saginaw, have a prospective quietus in the near future. The vestry concluded it was impossible to do anything further to the advantage of the parish or to its creditors. It was unable to hold property for fear of its creditors exhausting it, and it had no money to meet their claims. They concluded, therefore, to throw up their corporate existence, and the former parishioners met, chose the name of "Christ church mission of St. John's church," and invited the Rev. Dr. Babbitt to take control. He consented to do so on the condition that the parishioners would declare themselves morally responsible for their debts, and would honestly try to meet them. A resolution was passed that they would not repudiate any just claim, and the Rev. W. H. Wotton, of Fort Gratiot, was appointed as assistant to the Rev. Dr. Babbitt, doing his work at Christ church. Mr. Wotton will enter on his duties the Sunday after Easter. A heavy work lies before the mission, but it is not hopeless. Provision has been made for clerical services until the Rev. Mr. Wotton takes hold of the church.

DETROIT.—The quarterly meeting of the Convocation of Detroit, was held in St. Matthew's church, Feb. 5th. At 10:30, there was a celebration of Holy Communion, the Rev. C. H. Thompson, D.D., celebrant. After the business meeting a bountiful lunch was served by the ladies, in the parish house. In the evening addresses were made by the Rev. M. S. Woodruff, Dr. Christian, and the Rev. L. S. Stevens, on the subject, "What are the obstructions to the work of the Church in rural districts, and how may they be removed?"

The opening service of the tenth annual Sunday School Convocation was held in Paul's church, on Quinquagesima Sunday. The church was crowded. An instructive and most interesting address was made by Mr. Herbert Welsh, of Philadelphia, on "Sunday Schools." On Monday, at 1:30 P.M., there was a conference of clergy, superintendents, officers, and teachers. The subjects considered were: "The Problem of Teachers' Meetings," and "Catechizing and Instruction from the Desk." Tuesday, 9:30 A.M., at Grace church, the Holy Communion, with address by the Rev. Dr. Clark, papers and discussions in the chapel on prayer and Sunday school work; 2:30 P.M., papers and discussions on "The Sunday School and the Home," and "The Sunday School and Confirmation, Before and After;" 7:30 P.M., missionary mass meeting: the mission Sunday schools of the Church in Detroit; statistics of Sunday school work; treasurer's report; election of officers.

WASHINGTON.

JOHN ADAMS PADDOCK, D. D., Bishop.

SEATTLE.—On June 6, 1889, the church and rectory of old Trinity were destroyed by fire. Gifts received at that time from the Church at large, to the amount of $500, enabled the rector to fit up a little mission chapel in the northern part of the city, so that services continued without interruption. The old site was rented for business purposes, and a new half block purchased, and partially paid for, in the heart of the parish. After patient waiting for a year and a half, the Woman's Guild asked permission of the vestry to erect a guild hall, to be used as a temporary House of Prayer, until financial arrangements could be made to complete the new church. Consent being obtained, the work went rapidly on, and services were first held in the building on the 4th Sunday in Advent. The Bishop formally opened the hall, with a service of Benediction, on the 1st Sunday after the Epiphany. The Rev. Geo. Herbert Watson has been the rector of this parish since its inception in 1878.

DELAWARE.

LEIGHTON COLEMAN, S.T.D., LL.D., Bishop.

Arrangements have been completed for united Lenten services in the Wilmington churches on the several Wednesday evenings, together with the appointed preachers: Feb. 11th, Trinity church, preacher, the Rev. C. E. Murray; 18th, St. Andrew's, the Rev. H. Ashton Henry; 25th, St. John's, the Rev. M. B. Dunlap; March 4th, Calvary, the Rev. T. J. Little, D.D.; 11th, Holy Trinity, (Old Swedes), the Rev. K. J.

Hammond; 18th, Emmanuel, Highlands, the Rev. D. Howard; 25th, St. Andrew's, the Bishop of Delaware.

The Bishop made his annual visitation to Christ church, Delaware City, on Quinquagesima Sunday, and confirmed a class of four adults, presented by the rector.

A pre-Lenten Retreat for the clergy of the diocese was held at Bishopstead, Wilmington, in the chapel of the Good Shepherd, by the Rev. O. S. Prescott, on Monday evening and Tuesday before Lent. On account of the nearness of Lent, many of the clergy down the State were unable to be present. The subjects of the instructions were: 1st, "Our Creation and its Objects." 2nd, "Our Fall." 3rd, "Results." 4th, "Beginning of Christ's Ministry." 5th, "End of Christ's Ministry." 6th, "Our Duty as Christian Priests." The clergy were hospitably entertained by the Bishop during the Retreat.

All the Wilmington and many of the diocesan clergy will have daily service in their churches during the Lenten season.

PITTSBURGH.

CORTLANDT WHITEHEAD, S.T.D., Bishop.

The new church of Christ parish, Greensburg, is steadily nearing completion, and it is hoped that the congregation may be able to celebrate the Easter festival within its walls. The rector, the Rev. Mr. Van Waters, has started a mission at the neighboring town of Jeanette, where two lots had been secured previously by the Bishop, and paid for. A hall has been rented and fitted up for service, the Bishop presenting the altar, and the people themselves securing the organ and other furnishings. Congregations of nearly 50, and a Sunday-school of 50, have been gathered, and the hall is already too small.

On Feb. 6, the Southern Convocation met in Calvary church, Pittsburgh, the Rev. Geo. Hodges, Rector. There was a Celebration of the Holy Communion in the church at 10:30 A.M., the celebrant being the Rev. R. S. Smith, assisted by the rector. The convocation was called to order by the rector, in the absence of the Bishop, at 11, in the parish building. Papers were read upon the general subject of "The Progress of the World;" "in science," by the Rev. Mr. Van Waters; "in theology," by the Rev. Dr. White; "in politics," by the Rev. Mr. Byllesby. The last two papers elicited some discussion germane to the subject, and some otherwise. The second speaker's address made it evident that there are two kinds of "progress;" that we may progress from as well as in "the Faith once for all delivered to the saints;" that progress in itself is not necessarily an unmixed blessing. At 1:30 p. m., a bountiful lunch was served. At 2:30, a second series of papers was read upon the general subject of "The Parson;" "In the book-store," by the Rev. Mr. McKay; "In the study," by the Rev. Mr. Ensworth; and the "Book of the Day," by the Rev. Mr. McLure.

The Rev. Mr. McLure named the four books of the day to be, "Darkest England," "How the Other Half Lives," "Lux Mundi," and "Martineau's Seat of Authority in Religion," the last of which he analyzed in an able and instructive manner. Next came a series of able and interesting papers upon "The Parson Visiting;" "The Parson Preaching;" "The Parson Praying," respectively by the Rev. Messrs. Heffron, Rogers and Danner. The convocation was the best held for some time. In the evening there was a well-attended missionary meeting, addressed by the Rev. Mr. Dimmick and others.

A retreat for women was held in Trinity chapel, Pittsburgh, on Feb. 5th, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Bates, of St. Paul's, Cleveland. The general subject was, "The Fruits of the Spirit," and in the three addresses, Love, Patience, and Long-suffering were dwelt upon. The attendance was fair if the Church women of the diocese only appreciated these quiet days at their true worth, not Trinity chapel, but Trinity church, would be full to overflowing.

Dr. Bates conducted a quiet day for the clergy of the diocese, at the church of the Ascension, Shady Side, on Feb. 6. The Temptation of our Lord was the general subject of the meditations. The first upon the Reality of the temptation: the 2d, upon the Power through which the Lord resisted temptation, and 3d, 4th, 5th, upon the lessons to be learned respectively from the three recorded temptations. All felt that it was indeed good to have been there.

Readers of THE LIVING CHURCH will confer a favor on the publisher and promote the interest of the paper, by mentioning this journal in correspondence with its advertisers. Large advertisers keep a careful record of every reference made to the papers on their list, and estimate the comparative value of each paper as an advertising medium by the number of times it is referred to by their customers.

WE notice in a recent issue of The Southern Churchman some verses entitled "Thoughts to Comfort." They are introduced by the following anonymous remark: "If you think as well of these lines as I do, will you print them, and ask THE LIVING CHURCH to do the same?" In the sixty lines that follow the writer dwells upon the blessed assurance of salvation without means of grace, "or works by me wrought with laborious care." This is, indeed, "comforting!" We suggest the following stanza as a fitting close, and hope The Southern Churchman will copy:

I need no aids that help
Poor sinners on the way;
And oh! I thank Thee, O my God,
That I am not as they!
Though Thou Thy Sacraments hast given,
They will not help Me up towards heaven.

WE publish in another column a letter from the secretary of the Chinese Church League, again calling attention to the need of contributions for the extension of our foreign missionary work. The suggestion that the members of the League should send their principal offerings to the Board, designating them as "specials" for the China mission, seems, at this crisis, most fitting. It has, we understand, the approval of Mr. Graves, who is at this time making an effort in the Church at home to raise a fund for the support of several more helpers in the Central China field. The men have offered themselves, but the means are wanting. The work will be delayed at the very time when its extension is provisionally indicated, unless the money is forthcoming.

WE commend here especially the work in Central China, not to make an invidious distinction, but as a work in which the society referred to has a special interest, and in the hope of making that interest felt in a larger and more generous way. The members of the League have heretofore limited their efforts to supplying a fund for the publication of Church literature in the Chinese language. As the making of translations and getting them engraved and printed, is a slow and laborious work by the oriental method, there has seemed to be no urgency for increased liberality. Funds have been forthcoming, as needed, for all the publications which the hard-working missionaries could superintend. The League has done a good work, and its representatives in China have given a good account of their stewardship, as we have noted from time to time.

BUT something more, much more, is needed. The missionaries in and around Wuchang, with the good Bishop, are crushed with the weight of responsibilities that advancing civilization puts upon them. They see the vast Chinese Empire moving on to new life and enterprise. They see around them tremendous activities developing new forms of industry, new forms of thought, new social, religious, and political agencies. They are there to represent Christian civilization, the highest type of Christian culture, the Catholic Church. They are brave men and will do what they can; but shall they call in vain for reinforcements?

THOSE who have met Mr. Graves during his brief visit to this country, have been impressed with his earnestness, ability, good sense, and devotion to the cause. The thought of this man going back to preach Christ in the heart of the Chinese Empire, without substantial encouragement of increased aid from home, is intolerable. This almost single-handed heroism may be something to admire, but we have no right to permit it to go down in a lost cause while the means are at our disposal to prevent it. "Darkest China" should awaken enthusiasm as well as Darkest Africa. Let the Chinese Church League now realize that there is something more to be done than to publish a half dozen books annually in the Chinese language. Where the members have contributed hundreds for the printed page, let them now, for a time, send thousands of dollars for the spoken word, with its schools, and hospitals, and churches.

A CORRESPONDENT calls our attention to a paragraph in a recent issue of the N. Y. World, referring contemptuously to Bishop Hare and his noble work among the Indians. While the paragraph speaks of the Bishop personally, it is aimed at the Church which he so worthily represents, as all must see who know the ecclesiastical affinities of that journal. We are not disposed to speak disparagingly of the good influence of Roman missions among the heathen, at home or abroad. They have an honorable record in the annals of our country and in the history of the world. We give them all due credit from Xavier to Damien, but we think that common honesty, to say nothing of Christian courtesy, should compel a more respectful consideration of our own missionary work from journals that assume to represent the world.

It is a well known fact that Roman missions to the American Indians have had the preference of government patronage and support. How this unfair appropriation of public funds has been obtained we are not prepared to say. Doubtless one element of influence has been such paragraphs as we have referred to, in which the work of other missions has been treated with contempt, and the public has been made to believe that only the Roman Catholics have done or can do anything by way of civilizing the Indians. This is the most charitable construction that we can put upon the action of our representatives in discriminating so largely in favor of the Roman Church.

IN the light of recent occurrences, this assumption of the superiority of Roman missions appears to be without foundation. It is seen that the work of Bishop Hare and his staff of devoted men and women stands the severest test that can be applied. Schools, churches, hospitals, converts, are all controlled in the interests of peace. Buildings are burned, stores are plundered, the innocent are slain, but the Christian Indians of our missions have remained loyal to the authorities of the Church and the State. The efficiency of our system of education and discipline, as well as the wisdom, zeal, and fidelity of our representatives, has been demonstrated. The outcome of the crisis should be, not a spiteful fling, in a metropolitan journal, against the good Bishop who is giving his heart and life to Christianize these Indians, but a larger recognition by the government and a much more generous co-operation on the part of those who have called him to this post of sacrifice and danger.

"THE FAITH ONCE DELIVERED."

The secular press, so long as it confines its energies to the promulgation of trustworthy and wholesome intelligence, with honest criticism on the trend of public opinion and the conduct of public affairs, deserves and receives the approbation of all good citizens.

But, undoubtedly, secular journalism assumes prerogatives beyond reach of its lawful jurisdiction. Not content with attempting to adjust all local, and even international, affairs, it is found promulgating new definitions and codes of ethics, practically assuming authority in the realms of conscience and spirituality, until at length no ecclesiastical issue in Christendom, however august or insignificant, eludes its intrusions, or escapes its dogmatic criticisms. It assumes jurisdiction in the Vatican, in the administrations of the established Church in England, in the judicial action of the Archbishop of Canterbury, in the Presbyterian controversy, still pending, in the Methodist entanglement over women-representation, and in every ripple, or crisis of disciplinary procedure within our own Communion. It promulgates the editorial "encyclicals," and sends forth its raging "bulls" without showing any credentials of orders, mission, or "jurisdiction" in matters purely spiritual and ecclesiastical.

As was to have been anticipated, the recent and very lamentable defection in the diocese of Ohio has elicited its full quota of journalistic comment and remonstrance, and fools rush in where the gravest ecclesiastics move with caution.

The Church is prodded with all manner of counsels and admonitions. She is gravely reminded that the Episcopal Church is under the sway of the zeit geist, whatever that may be, and is already undergoing fundamental transformation into something rich and strange; that "modern thought," and infidel philosophy, and an inane "agnosticism," have broken down the bulwarks and undermined the foundations of her ancient Faith, and left her a prey to all disintegrating forms; that now and henceforth her solemnly-ordered priests may repudiate the Holy Scriptures with every particular of the Catholic Faith, and strike hands over the pulpit with the evangelists of "science falsely so called," without let or hindrance.

By what warrant, under what authority, does it presume to question the inviolability of the Catholic Faith, and declare that it is in a perpetual flux? Has the Church herself ever proclaimed an uncertain, shift, eclectic, empirical Faith? On the contrary, all the world knows, or ought to know, that the Church has held, and guarded, and kept the Faith, as an unchanging trust; in defence of which she has suffered persecution, and undergone numberless cruelties and violence, even to blood-shedding, and the torments of the stake, century after century; and that to this day, neither her vigilance of custody, nor her sense of duty and accountability, are relaxed.

The Church holds and proclaims the Faith, as a divine gift, held, protected, and proclaimed for the salvation of mankind. The Church did not create nor invent this Faith. It is the seal and token of her mission, as mediator between Almighty God, through the Incarnation of His only begotten Son, and a world lying in wickedness. That Faith is the shekinah of God's Presence, and the testament of His mediatorial office and work on earth. It lies as far beyond range of terrestrial forces, as the heavens themselves. It knows, and can know, neither variableness nor shadow of turning.

Nowhere is popular thought so utterly mistaken as in this talk about "creed making," about the "insufficiency," and "tyranny," and "despotism" of creeds. All these are strictly true and predicable of man-made "confessions." As men fail and err, so do these. So it ever has been, and so must it needs ever be. But the Church's Creed, which is "the Faith once delivered," is a divine, supernatural gift. It is the voice of the Holy Ghost. It is gathered up in the Apostles' and Nicene Creeds, stamped and attested by the unanimous profession of Apostolic, Catholic Christendom. Into this Faith every believer is baptized and born again unto newness of life. This Faith is the substance of the Gospel of grace and salvation. And this Faith alone, in its completeness and sufficiency, is the sole message of the Church's ministry. It quickens, spiritualizes, and authenticates every ordinance, rite, sacrament, and devotion. What can touch or comprehend it but God? and God is unchangeable from the beginning until the end.

SERMON NOTES.

WHAT DOT HINDER?

A SERMON PREACHED EXTEMPORANEOUSLY AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH, WELLSBORO, PA., BY THE REV. A. W. SNYDER.

See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?—Acts viii:36.

This was the question put to Philip, the deacon, by an early convert. The story of his conversion is one of the most striking incidents related in the Acts of the Apostles. It was right after the first administration of Confirmation of which we have any record. That apostolic rite had, no doubt, been administered before to many at Jerusalem. But we are first told of it in connection with the Samaritan converts. The first persecution was directed against the deacons. At the martyrdom of St. Stephen "they were all scattered abroad," and "they went everywhere preaching the Word." "Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them." Many were converted and baptized. We see what Philip, only a deacon, could do, and what he could not do. He could not confirm. So St. Peter and St. John went down to Samaria for that very purpose: Acts viii: 14 to 18. Philip's work at Samaria was over. "The angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying: Arise, and go toward the south, unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza." We know what came of it. It resulted in the conversion and Baptism of a high official "under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians." He was not a heathen, but a proselyte of the gate. He "had come to Jerusalem for to worship," that is, to observe the feast of Pentecost. He was evidently a man of earnest religious convictions. Though engaged in the administration of the affairs of a kingdom, he took a long journey to Jerusalem "for to worship." In those days such a journey took a great deal of time, and involved no small hardship and danger. At Jerusalem he had, no doubt, heard something of the wonderful events of Pentecost, and of the still more wonderful events of the Paschal Feast, of Good Friday and Easter, "for these things were not done in a corner." He was studying the Messianic prophecies when Philip drew near to him. He showed a preparedness of mind and of heart. "Philip preached unto him Jesus; evidently not only how in Him was fulfilled all that the prophets had spoken, but all that faith in Him involved. Philip had been telling him among other things, of Holy Baptism, for the eunuch said: 'Here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?' And Philip said: 'If thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest.'"

He was then and there baptized. Within an hour or less time from his first contact with a minister of Christ he was converted and received into the Church. "He went on his way rejoicing." Many and important lessons are taught us.

First, the simple practical character of apostolic preaching. Here was an honest, intelligent man who had evidently made much of such light as God had given him. He had already a true knowledge and a true faith; both however imperfect. He was further instructed as to both faith and duty; and then and there baptized. We hear nothing of his "experiences." He was persuaded that Jesus was the Messiah and hence his Lord and Master; was told of a consequent duty. He acted upon it in a prompt, sensible, business-like manner, said: "Here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" Contrast this with modern methods. Suppose you should hear of a like incident. How astonished you would be. But such cases were common in apostolic days. At Pentecost "there were added unto them about 3,000 souls." Consider too, the case of the jailor of Philippi, he "was baptized, he and all his straightway," that very night. It is not the way in our day. It was that of St. Philip, of St. Peter, of St. Paul, and of Barnabas.

Again: The case of the eunuch furnishes the very rare instance of a man who made the most of the very first opportunity. He did not wait to be urged. He was eager for the blessing, said: "Here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?" Bartimeus, the blind beggar of Jericho, was another example. Jesus never was to pass that way again. He was going to Jerusalem to die. It was then or never. He made the most of his first and only opportunity. * * What a rebuke to thousands in our day! "The Bishop will come again;" "There will be a more convenient season;" "There should be no haste in such a matter," etc. "Their name is legion."

The case of the eunuch shows that "to him that hath shall be given." He had already some knowledge, some blessing, some important elements of a right faith. Because he had made much of the light God had given he was divinely led to the fulness of blessing.

Again, he furnishes us the rare example of a man who served God under the most unpropitious environment. At a far-off heathen court, a high official among Oriental courtiers, he was a man of earnest religious convictions, and of high ideals of duty. An oriental court was a very hot-bed of deceit, trickery, and corruption. What a rebuke to the thousands who plead their untoward circumstances in life!

Again, we have revealed, in this instance, the conditions of "peace and joy in believing." "He went on his way rejoicing." Why? Obedience is the organ of spiritual knowledge: "if any man will do His will he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God." Why do many go unblessed? They have not a willing spirit and a ready mind; do not turn the knowledge that they have to any practical account; know of duty but do it not; months and years go by, but they remain only "hearers of the Word" and nothing comes of it, nothing at all. The most solemn truths cease to make any impression; they become case-hardened; they have faith enough to make them uncomfortable, but not enough to enable them to "go on their way rejoicing." "From him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

These are matters of supreme importance. Every thoughtful man should say: "What doth hinder me to be baptized," and from walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless? "What doth hinder?" On your part many things may hinder: "an evil heart of unbelief," some sin that you are not ready to give up, "the deceitfulness of riches," indifference, irresolution, lack of faith in the promises of God, above all, lack of desire and purpose to love and serve God. On God's part, nothing, absolutely nothing, hinders. All His promises He, for His part, will most surely keep and perform. The invitation is: "Come, for all things are now ready."

The unreadiness is in us. No honest man can doubt it. If he has any faith in God and the promises of His Word, he knows perfectly well that if there be any hindrance to all spiritual benediction and grace, that hindrance lies in his own unrenowned heart and unsanctified will.

A CLERICAL PENSION FUND.

The annual report of the Clergymen's Retiring Fund Society has just been issued. Its brilliant red cover seems to indicate vitality and a disposition not to have its light hid in any ordinary waste-basket style. Four thousand copies of the report will find their way to four thousand men who have influence in the communities where they minister. Then, with each report is a letter from the financial secretary, urging and pleading with all these men of influence—if not of means—to take the matter of a general Church pension fund to heart, and to give to the subject earnest consideration. The strongest, or, at least, the most common, motive to work, which can be urged, is self-interest, but this letter, we think, touches the quick a little nearer, when it calls upon all members of the clerical body to unite in the effort to redeem their order from its present heritage of penury and disgrace. This, we think, ought to be a very sensitive point with every clergyman who has a right sense of honor. That this wrong should be tolerated in the Church by the clergy themselves, when they have the power to remove it; that they should for an instant hesitate as to their duty to stamp it out and sweep it away, is what is hard indeed to understand. As to its being a personal, and, therefore, a delicate matter, the letter argues, as we think, truly, that it is "a Church work, to create a Church pension fund," and any one who raises money for a church or rectory which he is to occupy and enjoy ought not to be sensitive when he asks his people to contribute to a fund which is to remain the property of the Church for ages to come.

The report shows a membership of 26 bishops, 470 other clergy, and 33 lay co-operative members. There are also 600 pledges for five years of one dollar or more, amounting to about $6,000. There were 79 contributing parishes, against 10 in 1887. The invested capital is $56,687.67—all of which is very encouraging to the friends of a general pension fund. If our people generally are not informed of the nature and object of this society, it will not be because their own rectors have not information to impart.

This letter informs its readers that the English Church is awake and at work in the same field. The ruling idea there is one that touches the interests of the parish and rector alike. A retiring rector there is entitled by law to one-third the revenue of the parish while he lives; but this has been found insufficient to induce the old to give way to younger men, and the result is that an augmentation fund is being raised of a million pounds, so that the clergy may have a stronger motive to yield up their cures. In this view of the case, a general pension fund would benefit the parish not less than the clergy in our own Church, and, as time passes, this consideration would come to the front more and more.

We commend the report and the letter to all the clergy as interesting and suggestive upon a subject which is coming to the front rapidly, and which is bound to challenge our attention until it finds its solution in something like a pension fund which shall be adequate to the needs of the whole Church.

THE LIVING CHURCH.

SUBSCRIPTION DEPARTMENT.

During January and February, THE LIVING CHURCH offers special inducements to local canvassers. On examination of the following list it will be seen that by a little exertion a church or choir guild may secure needed articles of furniture or decoration, for chancel, library, choir room, and study. Any bright boy or girl, indeed, with the endorsement of the rector, can work for the church in this way and secure these articles as memorials or offerings. Only one person in each parish will be entitled to work under this offer. Money must in all cases accompany the orders, $2.00 for each name, but the choice may be deferred until the work is all done.

It is hoped that rectors will kindly aid in this work by commending it from the chancel as one in which they take an interest, and in which the parish will profit.

A clergyman writes: "Our Hymn board arrived here on Saturday, and it is a splendid piece of Church furniture. It is far larger and better than we expected, and everybody is delighted with it. We have gained in two ways, viz, getting the Hymn board, and also (which is of the greatest importance to the parish) getting more readers of THE LIVING CHURCH. I consider THE LIVING CHURCH of great importance in my parish, for people can't be readers of it very long and not improve in Churchmanship. I always try to induce my people to subscribe for it. Please accept our thanks for your generous gift."

The regular cash commission at all seasons is 50 cents for each new subscription. Those who prefer to work for this may do so.

The following offers, it should be understood, are for new subscriptions secured and paid within the time specified:

THE REV. DR. CLEMONS.

The Rev. John Baker Clemson, D.D., died in West Chester, Pa., Feb. 3rd, of pneumonia, after an illness of a few days. Only one Sunday was he absent from the Lord's House, in which he delighted to dwell. Although in his 88th year he used to assist in the celebration of the Holy Communion, and on last New Year's Day, took the entire service, and made a striking and forcible address. Dr. Clemson was a native of Pennsylvania, and studied at Princeton College and the Virginia Theological Seminary at Alexandria, in its earliest days, when Professors Keith and Wilmer were faithful instructors in doctrine and duty. After leaving college the future clergyman rode on horseback to the Indian Territory, and in after years many a mile was ridden by him in the country districts of Pennsylvania on horseback and in the sulky, in serving the churches under his care.

He entered the ministry early in life, and displayed great zeal in his Master's work. Even before ordination he engaged in earnest Christian toil. St. Matthew's church, Francisville, Ohio, was blessed by such efforts.

The parish of St. Stephen's, Harrisburg, Pa., was founded by the energy of this man of God. The Industrial School, near Wilmington, Del., was under his care, and the Rev. Dr. Richard Newton was a pupil. This was the forerunner of Bristol College. In later years the Dr. settled in Claymont, Delaware, where his Swedish ancestors had lived generations before, and there he long conducted a successful boys' school. Under his fostering care the church of the Ascension rose here on the beautiful banks of the Delaware. He stood high in the diocese as a member of the Standing Committee and a delegate to the General Convention, honored by his clerical brethren and the laity. He was a fine reader of the service and a good and impressive practical preacher, with or without notes. He threw much feeling into his appeals, and wrote in excellent style. He was fond of God's work in the natural world, and loved to cultivate flowers. Benevolence was a marked trait of his character, and to the end of life he delighted in losing self in striving to aid others, always giving a loving welcome. To me he was one of the noblest hearted of men; and I recall one kind and generous act after another through many years, to every body about him, and much kind advice. I have many delightful recollections of him.

It is a touching fact that Dr. Clemson's last days were spent where, in earlier years, he had been the rector of Holy Trinity church, and friends and relatives gladly honored him. The Christian soldier kept his armor on, and when his bright mind wandered in natural dying weakness, holy words of Scripture and prayer indicated the habit of a life hid with Christ in God. His earthly work is done, and the noble life is nobly ended, and now with his faithful clerical son Thomas, and his early co-workers, the Rev. Dr. Bull and the Rev. Dr. Boyd, he is numbered with the saints in the Paradise of God. May we follow him thither.

Dr. Clemson was confirmed and ordained by the saintly Bishop White.

S. F. HOTCHKIN.

APPEALS.

THE Order of Brothers of Nazareth (Incorporated), earnestly appeal to Churchmen and others interested in charitable work, for funds to aid them in placing permanent buildings upon land recently given to them; $35,000 is needed to erect a house for the Brothers, a Home for Consumptive Boys, a building for educational and industrial training for boys, and a chapel.

TO THE WISE-HEARTED IN THE CHURCH EVERYWHERE.

Funds are required for German work in the diocese of Milwaukee. The centre of the work will be the cathedral, and a strict account will be rendered through this paper for all money received and disbursed. Wisconsin is the German State, and the time is ripe for great results to answer earnest labor. The new edition of the German Prayer Book has been received with great favor. We need stipends for missionaries.

SANITARIUM.—The health-resort at Kenosha, Wis., on Lake Michigan (established 33 years), offers special inducements to patients for the fall and winter. New building, modern improvements. (elevator, gas, etc.), hot-water heating. Elegant accommodations. Chronic diseases; nervous diseases; diseases of women. Address THE PENNOYER SANITARIUM, N. A. PENNOYER, M.D., manager.

CHURCH MUSIC FOR SALE.

The undersigned offers for sale a superb lot of Church Music in sheet form and in excellent condition, being the entire choir library of the famous quartette choir of Grace Episcopal church before the introduction of the vested choir, and valued at retail at about $400.00. There are 4 or 5 copies of each piece as a rule. The collection includes Morning and Evening Services, Holy Communion, chants, anthems, and set pieces for every season of the Church, by such composers as

Abt,	Dow,	Mosenthal,
Andre,	Danks,	Mendelssohn
Berg,	Davenport,	Novello,
Buck,	Fairlamb,	Pease,
Beethoven,	Goss,	Pattison,
Butterfield,	Gleason,	Palestrina,
Bristow,	Gounod,	Rossini,
Faumbach,	Haydn,	Southard,
Burnap,	Hauptman,	Thomas,
Barnett,	Jackson,	Tuckerman,
Bassford,	Kotzschmar,	Thayer,
Barnby,	Lloyd,	Wilson,
Bennett,	Liszt,	Warren,
Clark,	Monk,	Wagner,
Costa,	Mozart,	Wesley,
Cherubini,	Millard,

$400.00 for $125.00. The whole must be disposed of in one lot and will be sold for $125.00, cash. Address HENRY B. RONEY, Organist and Choirmaster, 1833 Michigan ave., Chicago.

ST. JAMES, New York, vested, Geo. Edward Stubbs, organist. Matins, plain: offertory, recit., aria, "Ye people, rend your hearts," "If with all your hearts," Mendelssohn, followed by chorus a capella; "Lord, for Thy tender mercies' sake," Farrant. Evensong: Canticles, the Rev. J. S. B. Hodges, D. D., anthem, "The righteous live forevermore;" postlude, Calkin.

ST. MARK'S, Philadelphia, vested, Minton Pyne, organist. Matins, plain; Litany, Tallis; Barnby; Introit, Ps. 130, plain-song; Communion Service, Hartford Lloyd in Eb; offertory, "Lord, for Thy tender mercies' sake," Farrant. First Evensong: Psalms, plain-song; Canticles, Barnby in E; anthem, "Hear my prayer," Mendelssohn.

ST. PAUL'S, Washington, D. C., vested, D. B. MacLeod, organist. Canticles, Gregorian; Benedicite, Martin in Eb; offertory, "Lord, for Thy tender mercies' sake," Farrant. Evensong: Canticles, Gregorian.

CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY, Middletown, Conn., vested, H. de Koven Rider, organist. Venite, Gregorian; Benedicite, read; Benedictus, Anglican; offertory, "Enter not into judgment," T. Atwood. P. M.: Canticles, Gregorian; anthem, "As the hart pants after the waterbrooks," Mendelssohn.

TRINITY CHURCH, Bridgeport, Conn., vested, E. M. Jackson, organist, James Baker, choir-master. Canticles, Gregorian; Benedicite, Anglican; Kyrie, Tallis; offertory, "Enter not into judgment," Atwood. Evensong: Psalter and canticles, Gregorian; anthem, Inflammatus Rossini, (Stabat Mater); offertory, "Lord, for Thy tender mercies' sake," Farrant; Miserere, Ps. li. Gregorian-Stainer.

TRINITY CHURCH, New Haven, Conn., vested, W. R. Hedden, organist. Venite, Tallis; Benedicite, Martin; Benedictus, Gregorian; organ prelude, Largo, Beethoven; postlude, Fantasia, C minor, Berens. P. M.: Canticles, Gregorian; anthem, "Saviour, source of every blessing," Mozart; organ prelude, Religious March, Lux; postlude, Sonata III., Mendelssohn.

CHRIST CHURCH, Elizabeth, N. J., vested, J. S. Bennett, Jr., organist. Choral Celebration: Communion service, plain-song; Benedictus and Agnus Dei, Gilbert in A. Choral Evensong: Psalms and Canticles, Gregorian; anthem, "Let not your heart be troubled," Birch; Minor Litany, Tallis; offertory, Nunc Dimittis, Gilbert in C.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH, Morristown, N. J., vested, Alfred S. Baker, organist. Canticles, Gregorian, Benedicite, Martin in Eb; offertory, "Mine eyes look unto Thee," Sir H. Baker. P. M.: Canticles, Garrett in F; anthem, "By the waters of Babylon," Boyce; offertory, "No shadows yonder," (Holy City), Dr. Gaul.

TRINITY CHURCH, Columbus, O., vested, Julius

G. H. Bierck, organist. Canticles, Gregorian; Benedicite, Best in C; offertory, "O Saviour of the world," Dr. Goss. P. M.: Psalms, Anglican; Canticles, Gregorian, anthem, (morning repeated).

ALL SAINTS, Omaha, Neb., vested. Venite, Gregorian; Benedicite and Benedictus, with ante-Communion, Florio, in Bb and C; anthem, "Lord, I call upon Thee," Ouseley. Evensong: Canticles, Dr. Goss in C; anthem, "Lord, for Thy tender mercies' sake," Farrant.

A recent visit to Boston and parts adjacent, makes clearer than ever her musical precedence, together with the elegance and amplitude of her musical culture. Where else, we may ask, in the civilized world, has musical art, in its higher forms, become so generally popularized as an educational influence? There is the ancient Harvard Musical Association, which was organized by undergraduates in 1832, "for the musical culture of educated men," two-thirds of whose membership are, by charter, graduates of Harvard. Here the wealth, culture, and enthusiasm of Eastern New England united for a great public advantage. It inaugurated the first series of symphonic and classical music, supplementing the splendid choral work of the great Handel and Haydn Society, which is the oldest choral society in the country, and, we believe, in English-speaking Christendom. The Harvard association nurtured its charge so generously and for so long a term of years, that it had educated a public for Mr. Higginson's unique philanthropy of a grand symphonic orchestra as a city institution, capitalized by his personal worth and enterprise, and solidly planted on a permanent basis for popular edification and education.

For many years, under Geo. Henschel, then under Gericke, and now for two years under Nikisch, it has, besides stated visitations elsewhere, given an annual series of forty-eight public rehearsals and concerts in the great Music Hall, for the exclusive interpretation of classical instrumental music, solo and orchestral. The full-course tickets were all sold last fall before the opening of the season, and the Music Hall has 2,400 sittings. At least two other lesser, but excellent, orchestral associations exist, and are actively at work. But the "Symphony" is the musical representative of the Harvard Musical Association, and to-day the most admirably-managed society of its class in any land or city. There was the crowded hall, with its double range of galleries around three sides; with such an audience as may hardly be found elsewhere for general culture, high thinking, and sensibly-ordered living. There was the First Symphony by Schumann, with its four movements of transcendent joy and beauty; the Grand Concerto No. 5, for string-orchestra, five movements, by Handel (first time in Boston), followed by the First Symphony by Brahms, Opera 68; a programme possibly over-burdened by strong work, especially after the first number. But such spiritual and masterful interpretation, first by Director Nikisch, and then through his perfectly-trained artists, who catch and reflect his marvelous intelligence and exquisite fancies, educates a remarkable audience which in turn successfully stimulates the symphonists. And so all move on and forward together in a deepening understanding, and a larger sympathy. Who can estimate the social value and significance of such a living influence in a great city?

In the same hall, the next evening, the Handel and Haydn Society sang the grand Stabat Mater, by Dvorak, assisted by the "Symphony" orchestra, and under the direction of the veteran Carl Zerrahn. Think of a chorus of 600 carefully selected, perfectly trained choralists, enriched in the heredity and musical traditions of a society engaged in the work of its 76th season, and giving its 677th concert! Again the vast auditorium is filled, great numbers standing, crowding every foot of allowable space. The soloists were, Clementine De Vere, Emily Winant, Emil Fischer, all of New York, and William J. Winch, of Boston. The composition in all its exuberance of deep religious emotion,—for it is full of tears and implorations,—and its strange, solemn beauty of construction, suffered something from the very magnitude of the choral body, with a mistaken hastening of the tempos, which are "largo" or "andante" for the most part; while the choral numbers often are so subtly written, that they, in passages, lie almost out of reach of adequate delivery; yet, all in all, the conclusion was irresistible that this Stabat Mater must supersede all others, and banish, in good time, the irreverent and voluptuous setting of Rossini. This great chorus must appear at vastly greater advantage in an oratorio built for large choral effects, such as the "Messiah" or the "Elijah."

On the evening of Good Friday the same society will sing "The Passion Music," by Bach. Think of all this transpiring within two or three squares of "The Old South," popularly known as "Brimstone Corner," because of the pungency and fierceness of its preaching! Verily, times have changed in Boston, and people too. Sunday morning, there was an august and very solemn service in the church of the Advent, a privilege even more exalted than the choral and symphonic, for it was the divine worship of Almighty God, within His own appointed sanctuary, quickened by loving hearts and faithful souls. We heard much of the Sunday afternoons at St. Botolph's Club, where one or two hundred gentlemen of culture and social standing, with not a few clergymen, interleaved, spend a restful hour or two after four o'clock, listening to the marvellous trios, quartets, and quintets of Mozart, Haydn, and Beethoven, by soloists from the aforesaid symphony society. But we heard nothing of "Otero," or "Carmencita" revels in high places, nor the degradation of "society" men and women, in shameless saturnalias. Everywhere art was found and heard from only in clean, sweet, wholesome relations.

One should look at this sociologic situation with map in hand! Think of this rightly named "Hub," with its concentric constellations of strongly-rooted musical choral societies within two hours' travel in all directions: Taunton, New Bedford, Providence, Lowell, Worcester, and Springfield! At each and all of these places important annual festivals (and oftener) are given with orchestra and chorus, where in conjunction with the most celebrated, the choral and orchestral master-works are grandly interpreted before the people. Right in the wake of this Boston music followed another memorable concert of the "Orpheus" choral society of Springfield, who presented the noble dramatic cantata for male voices, "The Longbeards Saga," by C. H. Lloyd, in its own gracious and spirited way. Such perpetually recurring cycles of important musical occasions, certainly suggest searching inquiries concerning the formative energies of the higher civilization.

The vested choir of St. John's chapel, Trinity parish, New York City, reinforced by an orchestra, under the direction of Prof. George F. Le Jeune, the organist and choir-master of the chapel, left for Washington on Thursday last, where they sang before President Harrison. The trip was planned by Mr. Richard Mansfield, who paid the expenses. The choir returned Saturday, in time for the usual duties of Sunday.

MAGAZINES AND REVIEWS.

The Century, illustrated monthly, mid-winter number, is stored with agreeable, as well as valuable matter. The title paper, "Tallyrand and Napoleon," more than sustains the interest provoked by the first instalment. The great sphinx of diplomatic craft uncovers himself with the unconscious simplicity of an ingenue, disclosing depths of duplicity and cunning without parallel. Overshadowing Napoleon like an incubus of retributive vengeance, we look for the nonce upon a veritable Laocoon tableau, until the slippery, crushing fatality that has assisted at his suffocation, quietly disentangles itself from the fallen conqueror, and makes ready for the budding future. Such a conjunction perhaps the world never before looked upon. There is an almost offensively realistic study of "The Georgia Cracker in the Cotton Mills." Three "dialect" stories, and chiefly of lively interest, appear, and we sincerely deprecate such sinister hypo-dermic injections of debased vernacular into our current literature, as a menace to its integrity and purity. Two more Californian studies, en suite, lift the curtain from the earlier chapters of its brief, most marvellous, history: "Fremont in the Conquest of California," an episode of heroic outlines, destined yet to take a high place in our national annals; and "The Discovery of Gold," which will stir afresh the pulses of old "49-ers." Edward Eggleston contributes the opening chapters of a story, with an unquestionably fresh motive, "The Faith Doctor," who has not yet appeared in fiction so far as we recall. It has a crisp, inviting quality, and promises well under such well-practised handling. "Sister Dolores," by James Lane Allen, comes to its conclusion. To those who remember his "White Owl," a year ago, it will be unnecessary to dwell upon the originality and depth of feeling developed in this remarkable story. The Art paper is a study of "Theodore Rousseau and the French Landscape School" by Charles De Kay, enriched by several excellent reproductions from well-known pictures. These indeed, for such as have studied the great master, constitute the chief value of the paper, as they speak far more eloquently and convincingly of the spirit and genius of Rousseau than any commentator. Mr. De Kay deals intelligently enough with the literature of the subjects, which he evidently has mastered, but he fails to reach the deeper suggestions of the great Barbizon master and his exceptional genius, as a commanding figure in that grander art which current impressionism and pessimism threaten to stamp out. Nothing could be more reasonable, or of more immediate value, than the series of "Open Letters," some six in number—Cardinal Gibbons, Mary Putnam Jacobi and Josephine Lowell among them—on "The opening of the Johns Hopkins' Medical School to Women;" there is a significant concurrence of approval, emphasized by the medical men who complete the symposium, quite as gratifying as it is surprising.

The North American Review outstrips its higher averages of excellence, and closely presses the best numbers of the great English reviews. Of its class nothing could be more readable or more admirable than the symposium of "Gettysburg Thirty Years After," in which the Count of Paris, with the surviving Generals of Divisions, recount their reminiscences at a recent reunion on the crucial battlefield of the great Rebellion. And such reunions must be as rare as such battlefields. In this number, besides the Count, Generals Howard, Slocum, and Doubleday have written. In the March number, Generals Sickles, Butterfield, Newton, and Gregg will be heard. Sir Charles Dilke throws a strong British side-light upon the much-talked-of Talleysand memoirs, now for the first time finding their way into print. Mrs. Kate Gannett Wells discusses that significant conundrum, "Why More Girls do not Marry," with a wise and generous appreciation of the perplexities which surround it. The drift of the inquiry is healthful and sound; but the conclusions are far from reassuring. The inquiry rests entirely on empirical grounds, recognizes only the existing conventionalities, and ignores altogether the divine ordinance and sanction on which marriage can alone rest with the promise of the life that is, with that which is to come. Homer Greene probes the query, "Can Lawyers be Honest?" to the quick, finding himself in the midst of a collapsed situation, which will, of course, continue unchanged in its practical issues. A third, and yet more pregnant question remains, "Has Christianity failed?" and strange is the conjunction—the notorious "Ouida" and Father Ignatius are bracketed as disputants. Why this public humiliation of our civilization and its underlying Christianity should be suffered, remains an inscrutable mystery. Why such a woman, who has pandered to the vicious instincts of both hemispheres for more than a generation, should be tolerated in such a discussion, remains a mystery still deeper. Spirited and vigorous writing will be found in abundance under "Notes and Comments," in the last of which Emer on Parker calls the Plymouth church, Brooklyn, to account for recent disciplinary procedures.

THE VACATION CLUB.

BY ADA J. TODD, PH. D.

II.—THE ROCKS.

The next Tuesday the Vacation Club set out with jubilant faces. Miss Lacey said they ought to get some idea of the country they wished to study; and as the mineral world would come first in order of time, and was the foundation of all the others, they would take the geological formation first. She had learned that by a walk of five miles northwesterly, they would meet with some of the special features of their region, so they started in that direction with Frank and Fred as guides, being well supplied with lunch, which they expected to eat in some shady nook while they rested in the heat of the day.

When the exuberance of youthful spirits in green fields on a summer morning had subsided under the influence of a long walk, Miss Lacey said:

"As we are to study the earth, we might as well begin, for here it is everywhere under our feet, and these little pebbles we can easily distinguish as belonging to the mineral kingdom. They do not grow, they do not take food, they do not see or feel us as we tread on them. But the grass—though it may not see or feel—grows and takes its food by root and leaves, which we therefore call its organs. The squirrel running up that tree has all that these two have, and more—sensation and motion. We will begin with the mineral, the inorganic, which simply lies still and lets the rain and frost and sun do all they can to waste it away."

"Do stones waste away, Miss Lacey? I thought they last forever."

"If you will look at this cliff, you can answer yourself. You see how it crumbles at the touch, and the soil at the foot is composed of particles, like the rock, which have fallen down, worn off by frost and rain. Most of the soil, the dirt as we call it, has been formed in the same way, though a good deal has resulted from the decay of vegetable matter. Let us rest a while and examine the surface hereabouts. You see it is covered by loose materials, chiefly sand, gravel, small stones, clay, and soil. We will call these 'drift,' for a reason I will explain by and by. The uppermost layer, usually called the soil, is generally of a darker color, and evidently contains a different substance. Where should we find it darkest?"

"In the woods," said Fred; "and swamps," added Frank.

"Yes, because most vegetable matter decays there; leaves in the woods, and grasses or mosses in swamps; and you will find least soil on dry knolls and where the bed-rock comes near the surface, for under it all is a solid rock foundation. Evidently the upper layer has a vegetable origin, excepting where rock has worn away; but besides this we find sand, coarse or fine, beds of clay, and stones of all sizes, of peculiar shape."

"Do you mean worn off, rounded?"

"Yes, they are all rounded. We call the large ones boulders. If they are not over six or eight inches in diameter, suitable for paving, they are cobble stones; a little smaller size we call pebbles, then gravel and sand; but probably all were formed in the same way, and certainly are not of vegetable origin."

"I never thought of it before," said Bess. "Isn't it queer? Are they all rocks wasted away? What made it?"

"If you look around in all directions from this hill, you will see that the surface is rolling; there are hills, ridges, and valleys. Do you notice the hills, like the stones, are rounded and elongated; but it is a curious fact that in any particular region they all turn the same way. Now let us walk to the railway cut through the drift, down there, and see how the materials are arranged. Do you find them all mixed, Nellie?"

"No, they are in layers; first a bed of sand, and then one of pebbles."

"Yes, the layers are called strata, and the arrangement stratified. Notice this lower bed, next the solid rock. It is of fine material, which we call clay. It is finely packed together, and does not let water pass through easily. It is commonly called hard pan, and there is a good deal of it about here, judging by the swamps and ponds."

"What has hard pan to do with them?"

"I'll show you, presently. But first look at this little spring. The rain water sinking into the ground, collects above the stratum of clay and flows along till it comes to an opening here. There is another one, and so all the way down the hill, till they form a break, which flows down the valley where we see that green line."

"There is a swamp there, too."

"Yes, what causes it?"

"Why, the land is lowest there, and the water collects, I suppose," said Fred.

"Yes, but what makes it stay? If you pour water in a hole in the ground, it sinks in usually."

"Oh, I see," said Jo, "there is hard-pan soil underneath."

"Yes, and ponds are formed in the same way, only they are deeper, so that vegetable matter does not accumulate. But look at those large boulders over there? Have you never wondered, Frank, what scattered them over the New England soil, so thickly in some places that cultivation is impossible?"

"Why, no; I just thought it happened so."

"Nothing happens, Frank, in the sense of accidental. All things in Nature from the atom to the largest boulder obey the laws of the great Designer."

"But where did they come from, Miss Lacey?"

"That is what we could tell only by patient investigation. We should have to look at the material of which the rock is composed, for these boulders differ much in composition and will afford us a great variety of minerals for study. That is right, John; break off fragments of the different kinds, we can use them at home. Now, when we found the prevailing kind, we would note the general direction of the rounded hills and the scratches on the bed rock where it is exposed, and then we would travel in that direction until we found an outcrop of solid rock, bed-rock like this one, which would very likely be the place it came from, especially if it were a peculiar rock and found only in a few places. For instance in the northwestern States almost every neighborhood has a boulder containing native copper, but native copper is not known to exist except in the region of Lake Superior, so all these boulders must have come from there."

"But how did they get here?"

"Let us reason about it, Bess. We have found first, that these boulders are usually very hard, and are much worn and rounded as are the hills where they are found. Secondly, the finer materials of the 'drift' which seem to have been formed in the same way, are deposited regularly in layers. Thirdly, they have been traced in many cases to points in the far North. Can we not draw some conclusions as to the force that brought them?"

"Water," said Will.

"But an ocean current would be likely to leave them mingled together, and could hardly grind them so. Did you see a glacier while you were in Europe?"

"Oh, yes! all through the Alps, and they carried huge stones and dropped them all along, and piled up a great heap at the mouth, where they melted. They were called moraines. But were there ever any glaciers here?"

"Yes, several thousand years ago, owing to climatic changes, the northeastern part of North America was very like the ice-clad Greenland of to-day, and the moving mass carried boulders and pebbles from their northern beds, scouring and scraping the fixed rocks in its way, and rounding the hills, and dropped its sediment all over the surface as it melted, where we find it as 'drift.' It reached down below Long Island and filled the valley of the Connecticut with a broad ice river. So most of the surface rocks which we shall find here will be wandering stones, which it would be interesting to trace to some peak up in the British Provinces. But there is another spring and a grove, just the place for our picnic."

After lunching and resting an hour or so, Miss Lacey proposed they should visit a quarry in a high hill near by where they would be likely to find some of the native rock. Their guides soon brought them to it, a huge rent in the hill-side, from which men were digging out blocks of bluish white stone. These they carted to a rough-looking building constructed in the side of the hill, and dumped them into a round tower out of which white fumes and smoke were rising. This, Frank called a "lime-kiln," and said they were making lime.

"We can get some good specimens here," said Miss Lacey, "not only of limestone but also of others, for I see the rock has many impurities. It is a bluish stone which they heat until the carbonic di-oxide is given off and it crumbles into lime. Limestone will not dissolve in water, but lime will, and so we get the lime water we use; or if thicker, whitewash and mortar. All these ridges have this limestone for their bed-rock, and farther up, where they grow loftier, and are called the Green Mountains, there are quarries of marble, which is only a finer limestone. It is composed of shells. You are surprised, but here is a piece of limestone and there is a clam-shell by your side, John, left over from some one's clam bake; let us test them. Let me take the vial of hydrochloric acid from the box, and the glass rod, I will put a drop of acid on each. See how it bubbles up. That is caused by the escaping carbon-di-oxide gas."

"But it might be the same material and yet never have been a shell."

"True, but we sometimes find limestone with the shells still appearing. These were probably beds of shell, formed ages before the Glacial Period, when this was the bed of the ocean. They were pressed together till they adhered, like the coquina of Florida. They were covered with sediment, and the earth being hot, they had both heat and pressure, until they lost all shape of shells and became compact, even crystalline, in the case of marbles. Then there came another change as the earth contracted by cooling, an upheaval this time, and these mountains and hills rose, made from matter that was once in the ocean's bed."

With thoughtful faces, they wandered along, picking up any pieces of stone that seemed peculiar, and trying to imagine the scene ages ago, till the workmen announced a blast about to be fired, and Miss Lacey said it was time to go, as she wished to visit a ravine just below. This, commonly called the "Glen," was a narrow gorge, between high cliffs, just wide enough for a wagon road and a brawling brook, that was evidently of considerable dimensions in the wet season. Green mosses lined the hollows in the rocks and feathery ferns leaned over and brushed their faces.

"There must be rare plants here," said Miss Lacey; "we must come here often, and what a fine place for our lunch! But now look about you and see if you can tell how this beautiful glen was formed."

They scrambled about over the jutting rock, found caves and all manner of ferns, as well as insects and snakes, and finally came back to report to Miss Lacey, who was sitting quietly near a rudely fashioned wat ring trough, with many treasures lying about.

"Well," she said.

"The glacier," said Will, and the others echoed.

"All of it?" said Miss Lacey. "Just look at this." And she pointed to a large hole high up in the rock near by, about four feet deep, round and smooth and one foot in diameter at the top. "What do you suppose did this?"

No one could answer.

"This is called a 'pot-hole,' they are often found in gorges like this. I suppose the glacier left a little depression here, and a torrent rushing through it which filled it up and gradually wore away the rocks. Then a small stone getting out of the current began to swim around in that corner by itself, or there might have been two or three, and they wore out that round hole. See how far my staff goes down in it, and you can see the bottom there where the underlayer has slipped out. When this was formed, the water must have stood at that height, but ages going by it wore down more and more, and finally reached the narrow bed where you see only a shallow stream flowing to-day. Limestone regions abound in these ravines, and we often find fantastic shapes in the rocks, carved by water-power of the past. But we must leave these beauties and wonders for another day."

On the way home they passed a small pool, which a little brook, swelled by the recent rains had filled, but which in returning to its original dimensions, had left a margin of mud.

"This," said Miss Lacey, "is an illustration of another kind of rock-making, which I think we may find on our eastern boundary, in the shape of sand-stones. The fine sediment, mostly sand, which is quartz, with clay and mica, was brought down by the great rivers, just as now by the Mississippi and the Ohio, or as in this little stream, and deposited when they receded. There it lay and hardened, and under heat and pressure, became sandstone of various sorts, usually stratified. Such beds are being formed constantly, and you have only to examine the mouth of a large river to see the formation. Sandstones are useful for building purposes, and we shall no doubt find some in our excursions, and perhaps with fossils in them."

THE HOUSEHOLD.

GOOD FRIDAY.

BY LEILA R. RAMSDELL.

How long, O Lord, shall Thy white pearls
Be trodden in the ground?
How long shall Thy harmonious name
In jarring accents sound?

They, they, alone, the prophets stoned,
To whom the prophets came,
And best can those blaspheme the Lord
Who know His holy name.

T'was meet, O blessed Christ, t'was meet
Thy perfect sacrifice
Was offered where to worldly view,
The most dishonor lies.

Thy praise is told by slights of men
As though by angels sung; [bright
Where shines Thy luminous crown more
Than where the stains were flung?

Newburgh, N. Y.

A MAN said to a clergyman one night: "I would not have missed your sermon for $10." When the collection box was passed, that man put in a cop-per cent.

THE trustees of the British Museum are about to publish the text and the photo-zincographed facsimile of an original papyrus containing the treatise of Aristotle on the constitution of Athens. The discovery is likely to electrify the scholarly world, seeing that all hope of the recovery of any further work of the Stagirite has long been abandoned; but if this be a genuine text, here we have one, and that the most important, of the 158 constitutions on which the Politics is based. The papyrus is, unfortunately, not quite perfect. The opening is wanting, and the concluding chapters are mutilated; but there seems little doubt but that the roll is a genuine one, and, if so, it forms one of the oldest MSS. in the world, it being assigned to the latter half of the first, or the commencement of the second century of the Christian era. The British Museum has been fortunate in its "find," and it may be congratulated on the foresight and ability which have rescued from further oblivion this important constitutional history of democratic Athens.

Yet pray that God may speed and profit it."

—Robert Sallerne.

It was the very last of September; the day had been a perfect one, just the faintest touch of Autumn in the air and on the trees. The sun had gone down in a sea of glory, and the peaceful hour of twilight was hushing everything to rest. The sentinel was pacing to and fro. It was Jake Barnes' turn that night, and he did not like the work at all; in fact, it was hard to find anything in the way of work that he did like.

As he came to a sudden halt, by an old tree that overhung the water, he muttered: "It's lots of go d I'd do if the Redskins should come! I suppose they'd like me to kill 'em all. A nice lot of cowards the fellows here are; why don't they go and fight them savages, and let us take their lands to pay us for coming away across the water; frighten them, let 'em see we mean business. If we don't, they'll finish us all. I would'n't make friends with any of 'em; carrying them around the world as if they were white Christians; and just because they call one a chief, he must be treated like a king. I hope some day I'll have the pleasure of putting my sword through that red shining-faced Manteo."

He stopped suddenly, for a slight sound on the bank below caught his ear. He stepped quickly behind the tree, so that if there were an arrow coming it could not possibly touch his precious body. As none came, he gathered all his courage, and called out: "Who goes there?"

Immediately a soft voice answered: "Don't fire, Master Barnes! it's only me, Patience."

"What are you doing there? You deserve to be shot," was the gruff reply.

"Oh, please don't!" cried Patience, "I was only watching the stars come out, to look in their looking-glass. Do you know, Master Barnes, that the sea is the looking-glass for the sun and moon and all the little stars? To-night the moon-mother has stayed at home, but she has sent some clouds to take care of her star-children, and as soon as they look at themselves for a little while, their nurses, the clouds, carry them away home. Pretty soon they'll be all gone, and then the sky will be lonely."

Barnes walked on, and had forgotten the child. Passing the same spot a few minutes later, he started at the sound of a soft voice saying, "Master Barnes!" Patience stood beside him; the hand she had laid on his sleeve shook, and her upturned face was very white, while she said in a voice that trembled with fear: "There is a canoe coming over from the land, and there's an Indian in it, I think."

"Where, child? Are you sure?"

"O, yes," she replied, "and I was so frightened I hurried to find you."

"I'll make short work of him if he's alone, I will," Barnes muttered. "One of Manteo's fine braves, I hope. I wish it were the old fellow himself, I'd soon put a ball through his royal crown, and not feel bad about it either;" and he laughed to himself. Then, turning to Patience, he said: "Where is he coming ashore?"

"He was pointing towards the little bay, Master Barnes; but," she added, "if he's one of Manteo's Indians, we ought not to hurt him, ought we?"

"You go to bed, child, and mind you say nothing of this; it's my duty to shoot anyone that's lurking around in a suspicious way; I ought to have shot you. I'll have to do it now, if you don't hurry to bed and go to sleep. Off with you! I guess your Indian was all a fancy."

Patience waited for nothing more; she almost flew toward the little group of cabins until she was hidden from Barnes by the woods. Then, with an anxious look behind to see he was not following her, she stood still. Barnes had no idea of following her; he watched her out of sight, descended the bank to a rock from which he could command a good view of the little bay, and sat down, ready to fire.

Meanwhile, Patience stood in the old forest, alone. As her feet had been flying over the ground, her mind had been flying, too. In less than half the time it takes to write it, she thought over what Barnes had said about killing one of Manteo's men; she also remembered what she had heard Mrs. Dare say one day, after Manteo had been in to see the baby, Virginia: "Manteo is a faithful friend to us. If the Indians ever give us trouble he will stand by us to the very end." Perhaps this was one of his men; perhaps he was bringing a message from Manteo; perhaps it might be Manteo himself. Someone must save him!

Before she could reach the huts to call any one, the canoe would reach the bay; she was the one to save him. But, what if Master Barnes should see her and shoot her! For one moment the thought frightened her, and she crouched down on the ground. Another, and the brave resolution was made. She must save the man in the canoe. Once more she was flying through the dark forest.

Well for the baby Virginia, and for all in that little colony, that her steps were light and quick, and her heart was brave.

Patience reached the clearing on the ridge of the bank; on she moved stealthily, one slip and she would be in that dark, cruel water. Well for her work that the clouds had hidden all the stars. She came to the group of rocks standing out in the water; at the same moment she heard the soft splash of the paddle. One quick spring and she reached the first slippery stone. Could she stand firmly enough to jump to the next rock? If not, within a few seconds the canoe would have passed beyond her reach. The paddle sounded nearer; how her head whirled; what a giddy spring! But it was done.

"Chief Manteo!"

The paddle stopped; she repeated her words; the canoe came closer. "Who are you?" she asked.

The Indian took her hand and felt it as if to try to understand who or what she was, then he replied in broken English: "Ranteo comes from Manteo to the white chief. Why is the white child here alone on the rocks?"

"I came here to save you, for you must not go into the little bay. Master Barnes will not know who you are. He says it is his duty to shoot everyone that is about at this hour."

The Indian muttered something in his own tongue that was hardly complimentary to the whites. While Patience was trying to get up her courage to make the difficult spring back toward the land, the canoe had been concealed under some bushes, for Ranteo did not feel quite sure the whites were to be trusted; if so, why should this child come to warn him? He thought of all this as he drew his canoe up on land and hid it. He was standing, holding his hand out to Patience before she had gained courage enough to move. She took his hand and tried to jump, but the fright that had lent her strength was over now, and she was trembling and unsteady. Ranteo drew her to the rock on which he stood, then, raising her to his shoulder, stepped across to the land. He did not put her down, but turned into the unbroken forest, by a path or trail which his Indian eye had traced.

OUR CHURCH AND THE WAR FOR INDEPENDENCE.

BY A LAYMAN.

It is sometimes said by unthinking and uninformed persons that the Episcopal Church was on the "wrong side" during the Revolution: that it was with England and against the Colonies. This error arises from the fact that before the Revolution our Church had never been known by any other name than that of the Church of England, and during that struggle many of its clergy sided with the mother country. At the time of the breaking out of the Revolution, there were only about 250 clergy of our Church in this country. Many of these were Englishmen, sent out as missionaries by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. It must be remembered that up to that time there had never been any bishops here to ordain clergy. It was perfectly natural, therefore, that all of those men should take sides with the land of their birth. Then again, owing to the connection which existed between Church and State, all of our clergy, whether they were Englishmen who had been sent as missionaries, or natives of America who went to England for ordination, were required by the law of England to take an oath of allegiance to the British Crown, ours being the only ministers who were required by law to swear allegiance; and some of those who had taken this oath considered it binding upon them even after the struggle for American independence began. Owing to causes which have been stated, many of our clergy did side with Great Britain, yet there were a considerable number who did not. The Rev. Samuel Parker, of Boston, who afterwards became Bishop of Massachusetts, refused to read prayers for King and Parliament, and instead prayed for the American Congress and cause. Dr. Provoost, of New York, afterwards first Bishop of that State, was an ardent friend to America, and so was the Rev. Wm. White, of Philadelphia, who afterwards became the first Bishop of Pennsylvania; the latter being so strongly attached to the cause of the Colonies that the American Congress made him its chaplain. In Virginia, the Rev. David Griffith, rector of the church which Washington attended, took sides with the Colonies. The Rev. Charles M. Thurston, of Gloucester county, went into the army as a soldier, rose to the rank of Major, and became known as "the Fighting Parson of Gloucester;" and the Rev. Peter Muhlenburg, of Woodstock, who had been a soldier before he became a clergyman, went into the army as Colonel of the 8th Virginia Regiment, and afterwards rose to be a Brigadier General. That eminent clergyman of our Church, the late Dr. Wm. A. Muhlenburg, of New York, who was the founder of St. Luke's Hospital in that city, and author of the well-known hymn, "I would not live alway," was a near relation of his. Then there was the Rev. Charles Pettigrew, of North Carolina, and others who might be named, scattered around in the different Colonies, and in South Carolina where, at the breaking out of the war, there were only twenty clergymen of our Church, it is said that fifteen of them, or three-fourths of the entire number, took sides with America.

So much for the clergy, and now let us turn to the laity. From their ranks came a majority of the leaders of the Revolution, and not only this, but most of those who performed the greatest services. For instance, Washington, the Commander-in-Chief of the American armies, and the one, under God, to whom the nation owes more for its independence than any other, was a communicant of our Church, and died in it. Then there were Richard Henry Lee, called the Cicero of the Revolution, and the celebrated Patrick Henry, whose famous speech, "Give me liberty or give me death," is familiar to every school boy; two men, who, as is universally conceded, did more by their eloquence and oratory to rouse to resistance the patriots of Virginia than any others. Had not Virginia joined her sister Colonies, being at that time the largest and most populous of them, and furnished her Washington to lead their armies, it is, to say the least, very doubtful whether we could have succeeded. One of these Virginians, Richard Henry Lee, first proposed the idea of a congress for all the Colonies. And he it was who first introduced into Congress a resolution for the independence of the Colonies. On his motion, and supported by his eloquence, was appointed the committee which drew up and reported the Declaration of Independence, and in that instrument was embodied by Congress, the very words that Lee had used in his original resolution: "That these united Colonies are, and of right ought to be free and independent States, that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved."

Then the venerable Peyton Randolph, the first president of the American Congress, that very Congress which inaugurated and set on foot the war of the Revolution, was also a Churchman. So was Robert Morris, of Pennsylvania, the great financier of the Revolution, whom Congress appointed superintendent of finances, and who, by his management of them, and the pledging of his own immense fortune, which act reduced him to poverty, did more to raise the necessary means to keep our armies in the field, than any other one man. So was the philosopher, Ben. Franklin, whom Congress sent abroad as one of its special envoys, and who, by his tact and persistence, negotiated the treaty which secured for us the aid of France, without which our cause must almost inevitably have failed. So were Alexander Hamilton, of New York, afterwards the great statesman, and John Laurens, of South Carolina, distinguished for his bravery, of whom Washington said, when his death was reported: "He had not a fault that I could discover, unless it were intrepidity bordering upon rashness." The first of these two commanded, and the other led, the storming party which captured the first British redoubt at Yorktown, where Cornwallis was compelled to surrender, and the war was practically ended. So was General Nelson, who being at the time governor of Virginia, called out the militia of the lower part of that State, himself personally giving the State's security for the funds to equip them, and who, at the head of 3,500 of them, marched to Yorktown, and so reinforced the army of Washington and that of our French allies, that they were enabled to surround Cornwallis, and prevent his escape. So was James Madison, afterwards President of the United States, who, besides giving the benefit of his great mind to the country during the continuance of the struggle, after its close, when the States were about to fall apart, owing to the weakness of the old articles of confederation, was mainly instrumental in the formation of our present Constitution, obtaining for himself the credit of being almost its founder. All of these men, together with Monroe, and Jay, and Marshall, and Livingston, and Rutledge, and King, and the Pinckneys, and the Harrisons, and Edmund Randolph, and Lord Stirling, and "Light Horse" Henry Lee, and Lillington, and Duer, and Troup, and Wm. Samuel Johnson, and hosts of others, including about two-thirds of the fifty-six signers of the Declaration of Independence, were of our Church. Francis Hopkinson, of New Jersey, one of those Episcopalian signers of the Declaration, was the father of Joseph Hopkinson, another Churchman, who was the author of our national song, "Hail, Columbia," and Francis Scott Key, of Maryland, author of another of our national songs, "The Star-Spangled Banner," and also of that beautiful hymn in our Hymnal, "Lord, with glowing heart I'd praise Thee," was a devout member of our Church.

I have written the above in no spirit of boasting over others, of any name, neither to revive animosity against England, because she is our mother country, and America as a nation owes very much to her, notwithstanding the fact that we were compelled to separate; and our Church has acknowledged its debt to England's Church, by declaring in the preface of her Prayer Book that she "is indebted under God" to the Church of England "for her first foundation, and a long continuance of nursing care and protection." My object has been two-fold, first: That those of our members who may be uninformed on the subject, should they ever hear it said that our Church was on the wrong side during the Revolution, because many of its ministers at that time, sided with the mother country, may know that the membership of our Church furnished many of the men who were in the very fore rank as leaders, on the side of the Colonies. The second object I have is to show why it is that our Church is not now so strong in number as some others, by reason of the fact that so many of its ministers did side with England during the Revolution, and up to that time it had been known only by the name of Church of England. After the termination of the struggle, a great hue and cry was raised against it, and a bitter prejudice towards it lasted for many years, during which time it had no show whatever for growth; whilst others, none of whom labored under such disadvantages, were in the meantime building themselves up, and that too, to a very great extent, at our expense. But of course, such unreasonable prejudice was bound to wear itself out in process of time, and since then, our growth as a Church has been very rapid.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

CLERICAL DRESS.

To the Editor of The Living Church:

In response to one of the "Whys" of an American Churchman, may I add another query? "Real clerical costume"—what is it? Will he, or some one else, enlighten us? Where are we to look for an authority on the subject? To the clerical tailor? I believe the only ecclesiastical garb for the street with any degree of authority attached to it is the cassock. But it is hardly practicable to revive this. No doubt the ordinary priest's collar is a well understood and convenient badge. But beyond this, who shall prescribe the cut of the coat or the shape of the hat? It would be interesting and perhaps helpful, to have the subject of clerical dress discussed in your columns. Some of us really desire enlightenment.

THE CHINESE CHURCH LEAGUE.

To the Editor of The Living Church:

The most pressing need of our China Mission at the present time is new recruits. Two or three good men have offered their services but the Board of Missions is unable to send them. The managers have put forth a circular stating these facts and asking for an increase of funds. The Rev. F. R. Graves of Wuchang who has been laboring with untiring energy since his arrival home last summer, to secure reinforcements and has succeeded in enlisting these volunteers, will be obliged to go back without them unless the Church makes a right response to the Board's appeal.

The crisis is one of great importance, and every friend of the mission, as it seems to the writer, should co-operate to relieve the present difficulty. I ask the opportunity to say a few words to the associates of the Chinese Church League and all others who may feel an interest in its special work. The League has contributed funds to assist our missionaries at Wuchang in the publication of theological works in the native tongue, these being needed by native candidates for the ministry. Since the last offering was made for this purpose, Mr. Graves has been absent from the mission, and his colleague, Mr. Partridge, has not been able to devote much time to the publication work. For this reason, and in view of the present difficulty, the undersigned would ask the associates of the League and all others who may read these words, to contribute liberally and promptly to the general funds, designating all such offerings as in response to the recent appeal of the Board.

Mr. Graves is very anxious that money should be given for this object, and cordially endorses this recommendation.

"PANTHEISTIC NOTIONS."

To the Editor of The Living Church:

In the January number of The Magazine of Christian Literature may be found an article by the Rev. Augustus H. Strong, D.D., which is so thoroughly apropos at the present time, and such an admirable correction of the drift of modern thought toward Pantheistic notions, that it is well worthy of the attention of the readers of THE LIVING CHURCH. While Churchmen who use the Book of Common Prayer intelligently and reverently, are not in any great danger of falling into the error of Pantheism, yet, so much is written that contains the germs of this error in subtle and attractive form, that a clear, though concise statement of the doctrines of the Transcendence and Immanence of God can do no harm, and will, undoubtedly, pay one for the small trouble of securing the article and reading it most carefully. The article is entitled: "Modern Exaggerations of the Divine Immanence."

ANTIPHONS.

To the Editor of The Living Church:

Your correspondent, "An American Churchman," in the issue of Jan. 24, asks, among other questions: "Why is it so few of the clergy read the scriptural quotations at the head of the hymns? This is the antiphon or keynote of the hymn, and was placed at the head to be read. Will some one answer why?"

My understanding of the matter is that the editor, or rather the secretary of the committee, which is supposed to have compiled the present hymn book, placed these "scriptural quotations at the head of the hymns" on his own motion and responsibility, and that the committee had nothing to do with it. Sometimes they are apropos, sometimes not; besides, the reading of them is very apt to make confusion in the congregation, especially if the number of the hymn has not been clearly heard, as is apt to be the case. It is understood that in the coming Hymnal, if it ever comes, these antiphons (not antiphons)—for how can an "antiphon" go before the thing to be sung?—are to be omitted. I am not unaware that in the mediæval Church the word was sometimes used, but with evident inaccuracy, in the sense indicated.

SERMON ILLUSTRATIONS.

To the Editor of The Living Church:

Will the Rev. H. C. Kinney, the writer of article on "A Clergyman's Library" in your issue of the 7th, further benefit your readers, by naming some really good books for use in obtaining sermon illustrations.

There are many books of mere anecdotes, but I have failed to find one containing strong, virile illustrations. W.

SUGGESTIONS FOR LIBRARIES.

To the Editor of The Living Church:

Your issue of 7th inst. contains in the articles entitled "Reading for Churchmen," "How to Select a Sunday School Library," a list of useful books, etc., to which I should like to suggest one other as being a most interesting and instructive work: "Illustrated Notes on English Church History," by the Rev. Arthur C. Lane.

GEO. B. BULL.

Stamford, Ont.

To the Editor of The Living Church:

In your "library edition," Feb. 7th, you say, we "have no entertaining history of the Church for children." Let me say that Pott & Co. publish Lowrie's "English Church for American Children," (75c); and that so far as it treats the subject, it is just the thing, and no library for the young of the Church should be without it.

J. TAYLOR CHAMBERS.

Carthage, Mo., Feb. 11, 1891.

To the Editor of The Living Church:

Thanks for "library edition" of THE LIVING CHURCH. Would you allow me to suggest that better for most purposes than Tuck's Handbook of Biblical Difficulties, seems to me Haley's "Alleged Discrepancies," by W. F. Draper, Andover, Mass. It is cheaper and contains more instances. This is, of course, in no derogation of Tuck, which is excellent as far as it goes.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The Standard and Cross.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK.—There are some mutterings about the appointment of Bishop Magee to the Archbishopric of York. Secular public opinion in England heartily approves it, but some who claim to speak for the Church have their doubts whether he can be called "a spiritual Bishop in the true sense!" We have no patience with such trash as this, which indeed would perhaps be more fitly described by a harder name. No prelate on the bench is more sound in the faith or more capable as a Church-ruler. But his piety is of the manly type, and his ready Irish wit has pricked not a few ecclesiastical and other windbags. Hinc illæ lachrymæ.

HOW TO TREAT A SORE THROAT.

BY A TRAINED NURSE.

A SORE throat is a frequent accompaniment of cold, but it also often arises from some derangement of the digestive function. Attention to the diet is always important in the management of this affection.

If the throat is merely red and inflamed, with no spots on its surface, a simple gargle of salt and water, or chlorate of potash—one teaspoonful in a glass of water, will probably relieve it. Use the gargle frequently. A cloth dipped in cold water, squeezed until it ceases to drip, wrapped around the throat and covered with a bandage of flannel, will assist in reducing the inflammation. It should be changed when it becomes dry.

Meat should be avoided for a few days, gruels, beef tea, and light articles of diet are substituted for it.

When there are small white or yellowish ulcers in the throat, there is probably constipation as well, and a laxative is needed. Two teaspoonfuls of compound liquorice powder, or two pills of aloin, strychnia, and belladonna, taken at night, will relieve it. If the ulcers are touched with a brush, dipped in compound tincture of benzoin, "Friar's Balsam," they will disappear more rapidly. The application can be repeated three or four times a day. The diet should be light and easily digested, a raw egg beaten with milk and sugar and flavored with vanilla, or one lightly boiled, can be given instead of meat.

The tonsils are small, almond-shaped glands lying on each side of the upper portion of the throat. They can easily be seen if the tongue is held down with the handle of a spoon. They contain a fluid-like mucus which oozes from them when they are pressed. Its object is to moisten the food as it passes into the throat, and make it slip down more easily. Sometimes these glands become very much inflamed, and may ulcerate, causing the disease known as quinsy or tonsillitis.

The swelling causes the tonsils to meet across the throat, rendering the act of swallowing very difficult, and producing a sensation of suffocation. There are sharp, shooting pains from the throat to the ear, and the invalid feels feverish and miserable. Even talking is painful.

Cold applications to the outside of the throat give relief in the early stages, and bits of ice held in the mouth help to subdue the inflammation. Later, if abscesses form in the tonsils, hot poultices and fermentation are used to hasten the formation of pus, so that they may be ready more quickly to lance.

Inhaling the steam from a pitcher of boiling water is recommended. Fit a tin funnel over the top of the pitcher and put the end of the tube in the patient's mouth.

The diet should be concentrated and as nourishing as possible. Strong beef tea, milk, and eggs beaten with milk. It is almost impossible to swallow solid food.

This disease is a very painful and troublesome one, but it is seldom dangerous, except in delicate children. Persons who are subject to it should be careful to avoid exposure to cold or damp.—Ladies' Home Journal.

HOT DRINKS FOR THIRST.—It is a mistake to suppose that cold drinks are necessary to relieve thirst. Very cold drinks, as a rule, increase the feverish condition of the mouth and stomach, and so create thirst. Experience shows it to be a fact that hot drinks relieve the thirst and "cool off" the body when it is in an abnormally heated condition better than ice-cold drinks. It is far better and safer to avoid the use of drinks below 60 degrees; in fact, a higher temperature is to be preferred; and those who are much troubled with thirst will do well to try the advantages to be derived from hot drinks. Instead of cold fluids to which they have been accustomed. Hot drinks also have the advantage of aiding digestion, instead of causing debility of the stomach and bowels.—Baker's Helper.

HOW TO STOP NOSE BLEEDING.—Continued and obstinate nose bleeding has been at times very hard to stop, and a simple and effective remedy will no doubt prove welcome to those who live in the country, or at a distance from medical attendance. Several severe cases of nose bleed have occurred at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, and, after trying every expedient without success, Dr. D. H. Agnew, as a last resort, tried ham fat. Two large cylinders of bacon were forced well up into the nostrils, resulting in almost immediate relief and an entire cessation of the hemorrhage. This easy remedy should be remembered by those who are subject to frequently recurring attacks of nose bleed.—Ladies' Home Journal.

conducted by the Rev. Geo. T. Rider, an eminent critic in music and literature, whose work in this Department during the past season has received high praise.

SERMON NOTES.

These are intended to encourage and assist the clergy in extemporaneous preaching, and to furnish material for meditation to the thoughtful laity. Some of the most distinguished preachers of the American Church will contribute to this Department. Among the Sermons in hand may be mentioned by the author of "The Lost Barrel," which was recently published in THE LIVING CHURCH, and was most favorably received.

"MR. FAYERBROTHER'S CALL."

"VIRGINIA DARE."

an American Romance of the sixteenth century, by E. A. B. S., whose writings are probably known to many of the readers of THE LIVING CHURCH.

"THE VACATION CLUB."

by Ada J. Todd, Ph.D. This is an unusually interesting series of papers on scientific research conducted by young people under the enthusiastic direction of an experienced teacher. It will include the Rocks, the Flowers, the Stars, Water-Life, Microscopic Life, Sea Shore, Minerals, Forces, Photography, etc. Other valuable papers and series will be announced from time to time.

Subscription price $2.00 a year. To the clergy $1.00 a year.

For the Cure of Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Debility, Wasting Diseases, and Scrofulous Humors.

"Almost as palatable as cream." It can be taken with pleasure by delicate persons and children, who, after using it are very fond of it. It assimilates with the food, increases the flesh and appetite, builds up the nervous system, restores energy to mind and body, creates new, rich, and pure blood, in fact, rejuvenates the whole system.

FLESH, NERVE, BLOOD, BRAIN.

This preparation is far superior to all other preparations of Cod Liver Oil. It has many imitations, but no equals. The results following its use are its best recommendations. Be sure as you value your health, get the genuine. Manufactured only by Dr. ALEX. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

Do you own Tokology?

Mrs. M. S. Ramsey, of Cedar Gap, Mo., writes: "Three years since, I procured TOKOLOGY, a complete Ladies' Guide in health and disease. I followed its teachings in two instances with happiest results. I cannot say enough in its praise. I ask every woman: Have you read Tokology—if not, then get it at once—its value cannot be estimated in money." Mrs. K. writes: "Send me an outfit for Tokology. My aunt in Dakota says: If you must sell books, sell Tokology, as it is, next to the Bible, the best book I ever read." Sample pages free. Agents wanted. Prepaid, $2.75.

TWO NEVER'S.

NEVER let blankets remain in service after they are soiled. Dirt rots the fibre and invites moths.

NEVER wash a blanket with anything but Ivory Soap. Don't use either very hot or cold water. Dry quickly. This preserves all the softness of the flannel.

Shoot the Spy.

A cough or cold is a spy which has stealthily come inside the lines of health and is there to discover some vulnerable point in the fortification of the constitution which is guarding your well-being. That point discovered the spy reports it to the enemy on the outside. The enemy is the changeable winter climate. If the cold gets in, look out for an attack at the weak point. To avoid this, shoot the spy, kill the cold, using SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda as the weapon. It is an expert cold slayer, and fortifies the system against Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases (specially in Children). Especially helpful for children to prevent their taking cold. Palatable as Milk.

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. All Druggists.
